Sacramento Man Sought For Quiz In Pair's Murder

Brother In Mexico To Make Identification Of Victims

Mexican authorities today were seeking a Sacramento man, the last person known to have seen a Mill Valley garage owner and a woman companion alive before their bullet-riddled bodies were found at the end of a dirt road in Baja California.

Amado Lopez Lugo, chief of the judicial police in Ensenada, said he wants to question George R. Mojica of Sacramento about the deaths of Hermann Hofer Jr., 28, of 216 Ethel Avenue, Mill Valley owner of the H and H Garage at 80 Gate Five Road, Sausalito, and a woman tentatively identified as Marjene Wise of Sausalito.

Lopez said a car rented by Mojica and Hofer in Chula Vista about noon Wednesday has not been found. The bodies were found later that day in an isolated area off the Ensenada-Tijuana Highway.

Hunters found the clothed bodies. Hofer was shot twice in the head; the woman once in the back of the neck. Both had been stripped of identification and money.

According to authorities, the trio left the San Francisco area Tuesday in Hofer's car, but had to rent a new station wagon in Chula Vista when Hofer's broke down. Police learned later that a Pleasanton address Mojica gave to the rental agency was false.

Hofer's brother, Hans, also of the Ethel Avenue address, said Hermann left with Miss Wise, planning to be married.

Meanwhile, Hofer's brother arrived in Ensenada today to make a positive identification of the body. Hans also knows the Wise woman and is expected to assist in her identification.

Jerusalem's Gates Shut To Throttle Anti-Hussein Riot

JERUSALEM, Jordanian Sector (AP) — A state of siege gripped Jerusalem and most of the Holy Land of Jordan today after troops opened fire on anti-government demonstrators in Jerusalem's walled city yesterday, killing two and seriously wounding six.

Jerusalem was placed under curfew at sundown after a funeral procession for the two dead turned into another anti-government demonstration outside the walls of the old city.

Arab Legion troops took over the city, patrolling its deserted streets and blocking all access roads.

Telephone communications with the outside world were cut off last evening.

The Holy City was shut tight this morning. Its streets were empty except for police patrols and truckloads of troops.

Steel-helmeted Arab Legionnaires were posted on rooftops and walls.

TOWNS CUT OFF

The northern towns of Nablus and Ramallah and the southern town of Hebron, scenes of violent antigovernment demonstrations earlier this week, also were sealed off, with the townspeople barricaded inside their homes and troops posted outside.

The little hilltop town of Bethlehem, where Christ was born, and Jericho, 15 miles to the east, were the only towns on the River Jordan's west bank reported quiet with no curfew imposed.

All roads leading to the two towns were blocked by troops.

Gov. Anwar El Khatib told The Associated Press the curfew was imposed as "a protective measure to prevent further demonstrations" and would be lifted as soon as the situation permitted.

HUSSEIN CRISIS

Racked by rioting and hotly criticized by its revolutionary Arab neighbors, moderate King Huessein's Jordan faces mounting crisis and the possibility of more border flareups with Israel.

The demonstrators have demanded that frontier villages be fortified against Israel and have shouted for arms to defend themselves. The unrest followed a Nov. 13 attack by Israel against the village of Samua, which was left in ruins by Israeli tanks. Jordan asked the United States for more arms aid immediately after the attack.

Neighboring Syria has unleashed a propaganda attack against Jordan for holding back the Palestinians. From Cairo, the Palestine Liberation Organization—PLO—demands that its troops be allowed to operate in Jordan and has urged more secret guerrilla attacks into Israel. Israel says such attacks prompted its raid.

Congress Leaders At LBJ Ranch

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Both Republican and Democratic congressional leaders have applauded President Johnson's declaration that he plans to trim federal programs by more than $3 billion next year.

After conferring with the leaders for several hours yesterday at his ranch, Johnson held a news conference. The Senate and House leaders took part in the meeting with newsmen. (See picture, page two.)

"Our goal is to have in excess of $3 billion in program reductions," Johnson said.

He said the cutback will be accomplished by setting aside programs "if we think they can be done better tomorrow than they can today in the light of the war situation and in the light of other demands being made on the government."

Asked whether he and Republican House Leader Gerald R. Ford were "now generally happy with the effort the President is making to cut nonessential spending," Senate GOP Leader Everett M. Dirksen replied:

"Any effort in that direction, and particularly when it is substantial, ought to make everybody who embraces a reason-

U.S., Saigon Talking Over Truce Chance

Red Broadcast Suggests Hours For Cease-Fire

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The United States is discussing with Saigon the possibility of a ceasefire in Viet Nam for Christmas and New Year's, the Texas White House said today.

"That is the extent of my comment at this time," press secretary Bill D. Moyers told newsmen.

The cease-fire under discussion with Saigon is that outlined in a Viet Cong broadcast monitored today in London and Washington.

The Christmas truce, as proposed in the broadcast, would last from 7 a.m. Saigon time on Christmas Eve to 7 a.m. Dec. 26. Under the Viet Cong proposal, the New Years truce would start at 7 a.m. Dec. 31 and end at 7 a.m. Jan. 2.

A similar cease-fire was observed last year, but each side accused the other of repeated violations.

Last year the government of South Viet Nam took the lead in agreeing to a holiday truce, and the U.S. Command followed suit. If a truce is observed this year, it was expected that the same pattern would be followed.

Premier Nguyen Cao Ky said a few days ago that if any ceasefire is observed this year it should be only for a matter of hours and not days.

Their First-Born Are Quintuplets

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — An attractive brunette schoolteacher gave birth today to quintuplets in the same hospital where she was born 22 years ago last month.

The quints, all girls, were born to Mr. and Mrs Michael Aranson of Pittsburgh at Magee Women's Hospital.

Birth of the children, first for the couple who will celebrate their second anniversary next May, was two and one half months premature.

Doctors said there was only a 10 per cent chance all five would survive.

A hospital spokesman said one of the five new quints was strong, three were holding their own, and one was somewhat weak. The spokesman said no detailed report on their condition would be made for at least 24 hours — until the so-called critical period had passed.

Mrs. Aranson, a teacher in suburban Wilkinsburg, is an only child. Her husband, a law student at Duquesne University, has a 30-year-old brother.

Mrs. Aranson said she was conscious during the delivery. The first of the yet-unnamed babies was born at 2:41 a.m., the last at 2:51.

"I couldn't see but I could hear," she said. "They were counting, 'A, B, C, D.' I was shocked!"

Hospital authorities are calling the children, ranging in weight from 1 pound 7 ounces to 1 pound 12 ounces, by letters until the parents come up with names.

Mrs. Aranson's mother, Mrs. Joseph Greenberger, said that her father's mother — Mrs.

Bus Customers Just Adore Being Spoiled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government reported today a successful experiment to ease rush-hour traffic jams by luring people out of their cars and pampering them with "premium" bus service.

But, said the Department of Housing and Urban Development, it remains to be seen whether city transit companies can do the job on their own without the $83,616 federal grant used in the experiment.

The 14-month project even wooed commuters with free parking places at work into leaving their cars at home and riding the bus.

The special rush-hour experiment undertaken at Decatur and Peoria, Ill., started off with a single busload of 31 passengers and wound up with 17 routes carrying 542 passengers, the report said. It overlapped regular bus service in many areas.

The project was "essentially a personalized home-to-work and return express commuter service," the report said.

This meant picking up passengers virtually at their front doors, high-speed trips, free taxi rides whenever a bus broke down and a monthly billing system instead of having passengers fumble for change to drop in a fare box.

Each passenger merely showed a special "flash pass" in getting on the bus and mailed in payments of $6 to $10 a month, depending on how far they rode.

But when the federal money ran out, the troubles began. The special "premium" bus service was dropped altogether in Decatur.

It continued in Peoria, but the transit company began eliminating such frills as the free cab rides during an emergency breakdown and passengers started dropping out of the "club" at a rapid rate.

But, said the interim report, the company then began reinstituting the extras and business at last report was climbing back up again. There'll be a follow-up report later.

State Law To Delay Bond Vote

A state election law barring a second vote on a defeated bond measure for six months will force Mill Valley City Council to re-schedule the $500,000 sewer bond issue narrowly defeated Nov. 8.

On Monday, the council set the bond issue for a second vote on April 18 with school board elections. Discovery of the legal barrier means the bond election may not be held until the second week in May.

City Mgr. Bert A. Balmer said he will recommend the council defer the election one month to mid-May.

Cost of consolidating the bond election with the school election would have been about $1,065, Balmer told the council Monday. A separate election will cost the city about $2,600, he said.

Vote on the bond measure was 3,226 yes, 1,793 no. Two-thirds approval is required for passage.

Dead Man's Car Found Looted In San Francisco

The car of the man whose body was found under a bridge in Larkspur Nov. 8 has finally been located in San Francisco, according to Larkspur police.

San Francisco police found Norman Louis Haunstetter's car, stripped of a radio, spare tire and tools, parked at 711 Lisbon Street Wednesday night.

San Francisco police are combing the car today for fingerprints or other clues to what happened to Haunstetter, whose body was found under the Bon Air Bridge in Larkspur about three weeks after someone hid it there.

A toxicology report on the body is expected from the coroner's office early next week, according to police.

Police theorized that Haunstetter, a San Francisco bartender, may have died of an overdose of narcotics.

Highway Gore Rising Fast

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Deaths on the nation's highways rose Saturday at a somewhat higher pace than that recorded during last year's Thanksgiving weekend record toll.

Traffic deaths totaled 393, including 79 victims under 18 years of age, since the start of the count at 6 p.m. local time Friday. This was about 50 more deaths than were recorded during the same period last Thanksgiving weekend. The holiday period ends at midnight Sunday.

Span Traffic Snarled By Head-On Smashup

The seconds before a head on crash between two cars were graphically described by one of the drivers yesterday after the accident just south of the Golden Gate Bridge toll plaza.

Both drivers were seriously hurt when a car driven northbound by Philip C. Watkins, 50, of 246 Cecilia Way, Tiburon met a car being driven southbound in the same lane by William C. Teague, 29, of 94 Surry Lane, San Rafael.

"I was beginning to slow down for the toll plaza," said Watkins, "when a car suddenly passed through the dividers from the south bound lane in front of me.

"I don't know whether I got my foot off the gas peddle to the brake . . . I think I did.

"It all happened so fast," he told California Highway Patrol officers. "There was this flash and the pain and the fire began under the dash."

Watkins, a staff assistant at California Historical Society, suffered multiple cuts and bruises and was stated in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital.

Teague, who gave his occupation as a singer, suffered chest injuries and was in satisfactory condition today in Franklin Hospital, San Francisco.

He told patrol officers he could not recall what happened but officers theorized that, after leaving the toll plaza, he had momentarily mistaken the lanes assigned to southbound traffic during the rush hours.

Early Shopping Effort Spoiled

Yesterday was traditionally the first day for Christmas shopping for everyone — even, it seems, for the do-it-yourselfers.

Herbert C. Belven of 650 Rosal Way, Santa Venetia started early touring the shopping centers buying $60 worth of toys and gifts for the family.

At his last call he checked his car at Northgate Shopping Center — and found someone had stolen all his gift-wrapped packages from the truck, he told Sheriff's deputies.

Army Football Team Defeats Navy, 20-7

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Sophomore quarterback Steve Lindell hit for touchdown passes of 42 and 23 yards about five minutes apart in the final period today that sent Army to a 20-7 victory over Navy and its most successful football season in eight years.

It was the eighth triumph in 10 games for the underdog Black Knights, who lost only to top-ranked Notre Dame and bowl-bound Tennessee, and a glorious finish for young Coach Tom Cahill and his sophomore-studded team.

'THE LOVE BOOK' SELLS OUT

Three high-powered salesmen hawk copies of "The Love Book," San Francisco housewife-poet Lenore Kendel's work which was confiscated as obscene last week because it is larded with four-letter words and graphic descriptions. Thirty copies of the six-page booklet, at a dollar each, sold in 15 minutes at the City Lights bookstore yesterday. Carmichael Shuns 'Power' Challenge

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A Negro civil rights official is the latest to challenge Stokely Carmichael to define "black power," but Carmichael won't accept the challenge.

Carmichael, leader of the militant Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee is in Los Angeles to talk at a rally today.

The Rev. H. H. Brookins, a member of the United Civil Rights Council, telegrammed Carmichael yesterday asking him to "set the record straight" on his "gospel of 'Black Power.' "

The Los Angeles clergyman said Carmichael's talk of the need for Negroes to unite to exert power had proven "only subversive and destructive to the cause of black people."

Carmichael, who has been asked many times to define "black power," said yesterday "I won't be put on the defensive about black power. White people have their hysterical definition of it, and Negroes have their definition which is primarily relevant to their view of their condition."

The SNCC leader, who was granted permission this week to hold a rally at Will Rogers County Park in the Watts section of Los Angeles, alleged that efforts had been made to block his appearance because of SNCC's criticism of U.S. participation in the Viet Nam War.

Watts is the heavily Negro area where rioting in August, 1965, caused 34 deaths and $40 million in property damage.

Young Carmichael said yesterday that Negroes must unite to get what they want but that this doesn't mean they should withdraw from the general community.

"It is crystal clear to me that black people are already excluded," he said. "After all, all that counts in this country is power and not all those other words that white people mouth.

"Everywhere I've gone in this country I've been arrested for inciting a riot. President Johnson has incited riots all around the world, but nobody arrested him. That's white power."

LIGONIER, Pa. (AP) — A polite, youthful bandit held up the Fort Ligonier Motor Lodge Friday and walked off with $75. The manager, Bernice Stranahan, quoted the youth as saying, "I'm sorry I have to do this, but I have to have it. Maybe someday I can pay it back."

Cycle Betrays Patrolman

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP)—After stopping a speeder, Patrolman David H. Elmore dismounted from his motorcycle, its engine idling, to write a ticket.

But before he could reach the speeder's car, his machine's gears somehow became engaged and it took off riderless. Elmore couldn't catch it before it rammed a parked car. The speeder drove off.

There was damage to the cycle, the parked auto — and Elmore's pride.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Germans Try New Coalition

BONN, Germany (AP)—West Germany's Christian Democrats and the Social Democrats decided today to form a new coalition government.

The announcement gave no hint as to who would be the new chancellor to replace Ludwig Erhard, a Christian Democrat.

Mayor Willy Brandt of West Berlin is the Social Democrat leader and Kurt Georg Kiesinger is the Christian Democrats' candidate. The Social Democrats are socialists.

There had been speculation that a deal between the two leading West German parties would bring Kiesinger, an ex-Nazi, into the chancellorship while Brandt's party would take key cabinet posts.

Kiesinger told reporters he hopes a new government can be formed next week. The decision is subject to approval of the representatives of the two parties in the Bundestag, Germany's parliament.

Smog Still Plagues New York

NEW YORK (AP)—Light overnight rain and an increase in wind movement failed today to break the smog cover that has gripped the city for four days.

But for most of the smog-stricken Eastern seaboard the air pollution crisis was lifting with the entry of rain and wind.

The New York City Department of Air Pollution continued its antipollution alert and the Weather Bureau said a minor improvement in the dirty air had occurred, but nothing like what was expected.

The wind shift from south to northwesterly was so light that it appeared to have little effect in improving air conditions.

Sunshine and increasing winds were expected to clear the air further, but no one was breathing easy yet.

U.S. Opens Casino Probe

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—A federal grand jury heard the first six witnesses yesterday in what could become an exhaustive probe of Nevada's $330 million-a-year gambling industry.

The grand jury hopes to learn whether Las Vegas casinos have raked off part of their profits before reporting them for taxes.

Five of the six witnesses are employees of the Riviera Hotel-casino on the Las Vegas strip. The other is an accountant with the Nevada Gaming Control Board.

The Riviera was not involved in the state's inquiry into profit raking.

Some sources say the jury will avoid, at least for now, allegations by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents that unreported funds from casino profits have gone into crime syndicates in Eastern cities.

Federal Highway Cutbacks Will Affect Whole Nation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The anti-inflationary cutback in the federal highway program will reduce the actual value of new road building contracts this fiscal year in all but seven states and the District of Columbia.

In some states, the cutbacks could be substantial when compared with the actual volume of contracts awarded during the fiscal year which ended last June 30.

Some states ate heavily into their backlogs of contract authority which they had accumulated, something they won't be able to do now.

In addition to the 17.5 per cent reduction in this year's program, the Bureau of Public Roads cutback order also freezes the more than $1 billion in backlogs the states had accumulated through last June 30.

It will be up to the states, themselves, to decide where the actual cutbacks are to be made. The bureau anticipates that some projects will be postponed and others stretched out.

The Bureau of Public Roads actually committed funds for highway construction from July through October — the first four months of the current fiscal year — at a slower pace than called for under the cutback.

The bureau emphasized that the cutbacks are temporary and could be rescinded later with a further cooling in inflationary pressures.

The cutback in this year's program from $4 billion to $3.3 billion is part of President Johnson's effort to cut nondefense spending as much as possible without harming essential programs.

The reason some states will be able to award more contracts this fiscal year than last is that they failed last year to use a substantial part of the contract authority they had already obtained from the bureau.

In an attempt to spread the burden evenly among the states, the bureau order freezes the more than $1 billion in backlogs, ranging as of last June 30 from $119.4 million in Maryland to only $994 in North Carolina.

The freeze means that only $3.3 billion can be committed to new highway contracts during the current fiscal year which ends next June 30 instead of $4 billion as anticipated earlier. About $3.97 billion in new contracts was actually awarded during the last fiscal year.

Californians Studying Bad News On Roads

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Californians will learn next month what highway projects are being delayed because of the cutback in federal road funds.

J. C. Womack, state highway engineer, said Friday his staff was beginning to study what planned projects would have to be postponed.

Womack said he will make a report at the Dec. 14 State Highway Commission meeting.

President Johnson's cutback means that California will lose $70 million in federal funds in the 1966-67 fiscal year, reported John Erreca, state public works director.

"This could go as high as $100 million in the 1967-68 fiscal year," Erreca said.

But he added that the state may not lose the money permanently. "The money simply is not being made available to us," he said.

"There will be no slowdown of California projects already under construction or advertised for bids," Erreca said.

The federal cutback to California reduces the amount the state can expect from Washington to $298 million for 1967-68, Erreca said.

"It is doubtful that we can meet the deadline for completion of our portion of the interstate system by 1973 if the reduction is continued past the 1968 fiscal year," Erreca said. He added that the reduction also affects federal aid for primary, urban and secondary roads.

Birthday Celebrant Has Usual Walk For His 112th

AKRON, N.Y. (AP)—Barthold Brier arose at dawn today, took his usual one-mile walk and then returned home to enjoy a cup of coffee and a piece of cake on his 112th birthday.

He expected to have coffee and cake at intervals throughout the day as friends stopped by to wish him a happy birthday.

Mrs. William S. Fenton, with whom Brier lives, said the day-long celebration was conceived because "we don't want to interrupt his routine."

He was born Nov. 26, 1854 at Arnhem, the Netherlands. He was orphaned as a child and raised by a grandmother. He came to the United States in 1887 and lived for nearly 78 years in the Niagara County community of Johnson Creek.

Brier never married. He moved to this community east of Buffalo eight months ago when Mrs. Fenton and her husband decided they could not "bear to see him in an old folks home away from his garden and freedom to take long walks."

Mrs. Fenton's aunt had employed Brier for many years as a farmhand.

Dirksen's Mouth Waters For LBJ's Tobacco Deer

AUSTIN Tex. (AP) — Sen. Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois has his eye on Clarence, President Johnson's cigarette eating buck deer, for his refrigerator.

Clarence so intrigued Dirksen when he visited the LBJ Ranch yesterday with other congressional leaders that he has given up his claim for a presidential bull calf.

As Dirksen, Senate Republican leader, told it:

"Well, long ago our distinguished President invited me to come here. On that occasion, he said, 'If you will come down I will give you a bull calf.'

"But on other occasions he invited me, and I said, 'You never did give me that bull calf.'

"He said, 'You come, and I will give him to you.'

"I said, 'I have no place to keep him; so you slaughter him and get the best butcher in Johnson City to do the job, and when we get him in my refrigerator, I will come down and see you.'

"I still haven't gotten the calf, either iced or hot. But here I am, and I am delighted. So maybe I will modify that request a little bit. If he will get me that 10-prong buck Clarence that eats cigarettes and does not care whether they are filtered or not, and cuts him up so that I get him in my freezer, I will call it square."

An area of the ranch — several fenced pastures — is set aside for the wildlife.

Johnson likes to drive ranch visitors into the pasture where Clarence makes his home. Clarence's routine is to amble up to the car in quest of cigarettes. Johnson, a nonsmoker since his 1955 heart attack, borrows cigarettes from the first person who has a pack handy to appease Clarence's craving.

Birch Society Sued By Widow

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Hollywood widow has sued the John Birch Society and Dan Smoot, a radio-television commentator, claiming they influenced the will of her husband.

The Superior Court suit was filed Friday by Yolanda Lewis, whose husband, Dallas Bedord Lewis, owned the Doctor Ross Dog Food Co. He died last April at 62.

His will, written in December, left the society and Smoot, $1 million each. It also left $1 million to Pepperdine College of Los Angeles. The school declined the gift because of a condition that it grant Smoot an honorary degree.

Donohoe was arraigned before Municipal Court Judge Peter Allen Smith, and plea entry was scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Tuesday. Bail of $550 was set.

The community group also was told that signs regulating surfing and swimming were scheduled to be put up on the beach within the next two weeks. The signs were supposed to go up some time ago, but beach conditions prevented it.

AIR BASE CLASS

By PAT PERRY

There we sat on rows of metal chairs at Hamilton Air Force Base Service Club, just another evening class. Over at the NCO Academy, San Francisco State College teachers were conducting humanities and English college classes; at the education center, young airmen studied in high school extension.

And there in the blue-painted Riviera room, with television blaring next door, pool cues clattering too, 28 of us listened to another lecture.

"Will we get a chance to try astral projection tonight?"

A buxom lady from Petaluma in an enormous blue hat asked: "Have you ever projected yourself and seen yourself lying there? It's a rather horrifying experience—the first time around."

And no one was surprised, least of all Lieutenant Hammond, who's a data control officer during the day, a practicing hypnotist the rest of the time.

This week he began a series of lectures on hypnotism and parapsychology—with the blessing of the Air Force which also offers classes in electronics, typewriter repair and ceramics.

This fall's lectures are a continuation of a series he began in June, and the audience included a group of young airmen who are now using self-hypnotism to advance their studies, and an Air Force wife who was cured three months ago of smoking three packs of cigarettes a day.

The questions came thick and fast: "When you've left your body through astral projection how do you get back in?" "Is karate a form of self-hypnosis?"

And then the group, self-consciously, with shuffles and giggles, settled down to be hypnotized.

Relaxed, after taking five deep breaths, arms extended, everyone was silent as Hammond suggested imagining a string around the right wrist with a heavy weight attached. His voice droned monotonously—interrupted only by a Beatles record booming from the Blue Jet snack bar outside.

"Your arm is getting heavier and heavier; the weight is pulling your arm down," continued the voice. "Concentrate on your wrist."

And there, unfortunately, the commentary must end. For one skeptical, objective reporter immediately became deeply hypnotized, proceeded to be blown over by nonexistent winds, glued to the floor, couldn't remember her name, and accomplished a little levitation.

The next Air Force hypnotism lecture is scheduled for Dec. 13. What sort of dress do you wear for astral projection?

Citizen Hears Police Charge

Charles F. Richmond, 39, was arraigned in Marin Municipal Court yesterday on a charge of obstructing two San Rafael police officers in their duties.

He was released on his own recognizance and is to enter plea at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Richmond, of 45 Woodland Avenue, San Rafael, allegedly obstructed Patrolmen Terry V. Lucchesi and Arthur E. Myers, who were attempting to untangle a minor traffic snarl in front of Richmond's home.

Sparkling Weather For The Weekend

Marin County weather will continue crisp and clear through tomorrow, while the extreme northern sections of the state will experience light rain, the U.S. Weather Bureau said.

A light frost sparkled briefly at high places in Marin early this morning, while temperatures ranged in the mid-thirties throughout most of the county.

CRISIS

ting the blame for Hussein's troubles on Israel.

They consider Hussein the outstanding moderate Arab chief of state and have expressed guarded confidence that he will survive the pressure from militant Arabs.

Meanwhile, the stinging rebuke and threat of punishment that the Security Council has leveled against Israel reflects U.N. concern over the impact border clashes might have on the explosive situation in Jordan.

Diplomats noted that the council reacted to Israel's reprisal raids against three Jordanian villages Nov. 13 with the toughest resolution it has passed against that state in 15 years.

By a vote of 14-0 yesterday the council issued a threat of economic and military penalties against Israel for the first time since it began dealing with the Middle East border quarrels.

Israel was plainly stung by the wording of the draft. Israeli Ambassador Michael Comay told the council that the basic cause of Arab-Israeli tension lies "in Arab belligerence and military threat against Israel."

U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg said he voted yesterday's condemnation of Israel because it reflected U.S. policy based on respect for the territorial integrity of all Middle East nations.

Diplomats saw this as a thinly veiled U.S. warning to such Arab leaders as President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic not to take advantage of unrest being fomented by Palestine Arab forces against the throne of Jordan's King Hussein.

able or moderate or conservative view quite happy. Moving in that direction certainly does make us happy. It will have a definite impact on the inflationary picture that obtains to some extent in the country."

Ford, one of Johnson's sharpest congressional critics, said "it seems to me we are moving exactly in the right direction."

Johnson, since assuming the presidency, has met many times with the bipartisan leadership. But yesterday's conference was the first such meeting at the LBJ Ranch.

The presidential news session was so hurriedly arranged that newsmen had to be taken to the ranch by helicopters from Austin, 65 miles to the west. Johnson, who said he is feeling fine following his Nov. 16 operations for a throat polyp and repair of an incisional hernia, wore a light tan sports outfit with a big presidential seal on it.

Johnson began by telling newsmen the discussions with the leaders included the military and diplomatic situations in Viet Nam, the economic situation and program cutbacks.

Asked his appraisal of the military situation, Johnson said much of the latest report on that is classified.

But he added: "The summary is that the military operations continue to be successful. Our forces maintain the initiative. Our losses are light."

The President gave himself considerable latitude when asked how much extra money will be requested to meet war costs between next January and July 1. He said the sum would be between $5 billion and $15 billion.

Johnson answered with one word, "Yes," when asked whether the possibility of an income tax increase was discussed.

Questioned further, he said the tax discussion was purely incidental, and that he didn't believe the leaders expressed their views.

Patrol Car Prevents Train-Auto Smashup

STEUBENVILLE Ohio (AP) — An Ohio Highway Patrol cruiser raced alongside and stopped a railroad train that was bearing down on a crossing where a car had wrecked Thursday night pinning the driver inside.

Capt. Edmund McGowan of the Steubenville patrol post caught up with the train on Ohio 7 about two miles north of here and attracted the attention of the engineer with the cruiser's spotlight and red flasher.

The train stopped about 2,000 feet short of a Pennsylvania Railroad crossing where James E. Maumaw, 25, of Mingo Junction, was trapped in the twisted wreckage of his car.

McGowan said the patrol dispatcher radioed him that the control tower in Toronto had been unable to reach the train in time to stop it.

The patrol officer chased the train about two miles down Ohio 7, which parallels the railroad tracks, before he caught up with it.

"The engineer said he got about half a signal from the control tower when he came through Toronto," McGowan said. "Then he saw me and knew something was wrong."

McGowan said an ambulance had parked beside the road north of the accident scene. "When the engineer saw his lights and the fuses (flares) he had put out, he knew something was wrong and hit the brakes," he said.

Maumaw was reported in "fairly good" condition early today at Ohio Valley Hospital here. A hospital supervisor said he suffered multiple bruises, abrasions, cuts and a possible back injury.

Sunset Strip Again Has Peace—If Not Quiet

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Boys with long tresses and girls with short dresses gathered along the Sunset Strip last night but no trouble was reported.

The relative quiet contrasted sharply with uprisings the past two weekends by teen-agers and young adults protesting the 10 p.m. curfew and alleged police harassment.

Earlier in the day, county officials discussed a plan to raise the curfew to midnight or 1 a.m. for persons under 18.

Groups of teen-agers milled about two coffee houses, The Fifth Estate and Pandora's Box, both rallying points for earlier disturbances, but police reported no incidents.

Some young people carried signs protesting the curfew.

A rally is scheduled tonight at Pandora's Box and leaders vowed that rallies would continue on alternate weekends until the teen-agers' grievances are settled.

A number of high school honor students told a City Hall meeting yesterday that school officials and parents should be blamed for uprisings along the Strip, not teen-agers.

Victor Johnson, 17, said schools do not impose sufficient discipline and parents merely tell their children to "Go out and have a good time."

Youth Booked On Several Charges

A 17-year-old San Anselmo youth was arrested last night in San Rafael on charges of tampering with parked cars, resisting arrest and being drunk after he was caught entering a car in the parking lot of the Marin County Communications Center, 519 Fourth Street.

Police said the youth ran after he was caught going through a car belonging to William Keaton of 552 Belle Avenue, San Rafael, but officers caught him near Third and Irwin streets after a four-block chase on foot. An accomplice escaped, however.

Police said the suspect admitted entering other parked vehicles in the city last night, taking a pack of cigarettes and a ski parka.

Brief Blackout In San Rafael

A five-block section of downtown San Rafael was without lights for a half-hour last night when equipment failed in a Pacific Gas and Electric Co. transformer vault at Fourth and C streets.

Power was out in an area bounded by Fourth, Julia, C and Cijos streets from 7:22 p.m. to 7:53 p.m., according to a company spokesman. Radio KTIM also was affected.

Aranson's great grandmother—had been a twin. Greenberger said he had some first cousins who had been twins, but he couldn't recall any details or names.

"I always wanted a large family," Mrs. Greenberger said. "It looks like I'm going to get it in my grandchildren!"

Aranson said his wife did not take any drug or pill for fertility.

"We had been advised to expect a multiple birth," he said, "but the extent of it, we were shocked.

"We're really very much excited about it," he said. "I don't think I've quite gotten both feet on the ground yet."

Aranson is a graduate of Duquesne. His wife graduated from the University of Pittsburgh.

A hospital spokesman said there had been one previous major multiple birth at the hospital, quadruplets, many years ago, but was not certain whether they survived.

Magee and Women's Hospital were merged into Magee-Women's in 1961. Both Mr. and Mrs. Aranson were born in Magee. Mrs. Aranson was also a premature baby and weighed 4 pounds 5 ounces at birth.

The most recent quintuplets were four girls and a boy born to Mrs. D. W. Lawson of Auckland, New Zealand, on July 27, 1965. There are three other known living sets.

U.S. Transport Crash Kills 27

SAIGON (AP) — A U.S. Air Force transport crashed and burned tonight near Saigon's airport, killing all 27 persons aboard, U.S. military officials said.

It was believed the plane, a twin-engine C-47 Dakota, lost power in one of its engines shortly after taking off from the Tan Son Nhut airfield in the outskirts of the capital and the pilot was trying to return to the airport when the plane plunged into a swampy area.

It was believed all aboard were military personnel, but this was not confirmed immediately.

Byron Rumford Asks Recount

Rumford said there was a "possibility of error" in the count because new voting machines were used in the election. He added, "If I lose, I'll lose gracefully."

Cards Lead To Fatal Gunshot

CONCORD (AP) — A service station attendant, David Parker, 30, was shot and killed today in an argument outside a Pacheco card room.

Police booked Robert Eue, 34, owner of Eue Circuit Enterprises of Concord, for investigation of murder.

Officers said both men had been ejected from the card room and continued their argument outside. Parker died at the Contra Costa County Hospital at Martinez of a pistol wound near the heart.

SEW SIMPLE

Hint For Facing Sleeveless Dress

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE:

I am making a cocktail dress without sleeves and would like to cut my facing for the neckline and the armhole in one piece. Since I am making this dress sleeveless from a pattern with sleeves, I don't have this type of facing. Please tell me how to cut and proceed with it.—MRS. O. R.

DEAR MRS. O. R.:

This will answer many of you who have written me the same thing. Please cut these illustrations out and put them with your valuable sewing hints. If you don't use it now, you will certainly wish you had it when you begin making sleeveless summer dresses.

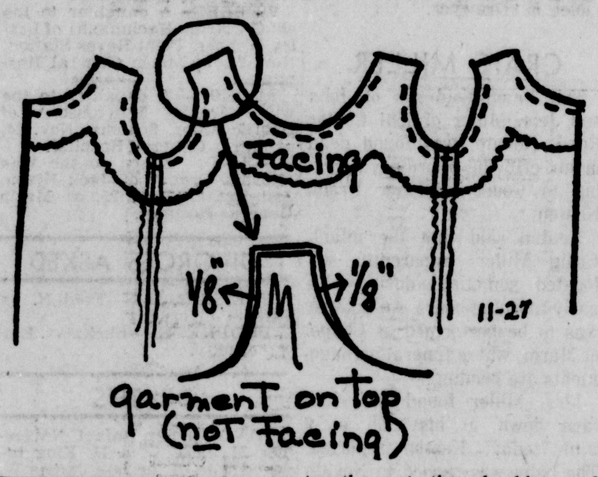
1. To cut the dress correctly when it called for sleeves, be sure to add ½ inch to the lower end of the armhole which would build it up closer to your underarm. Cut the facing with the same outline as the outer edges of your garment, front and back, making it about 2½ inches wide as sketched.

2. If garment needs interfacing, cut one for the neck only; the armholes do not need to be interfaced. If garment is to be completely underlined, cut underlining the same as the garment and treat as one piece, then cut a separate facing out of the garment fabric.

3. When stitching the facing to the neckline and the armholes of your garment, end the stitching about 2 inches from the ends of the shoulder front and back, and back stitch or secure your stitching. If you have a long narrow strap (usually found in low-cut front or back necklines) do not keep the garment and the facing edges together at this area.

Instead, bring the garment fabric about ⅛ inch in from the edge of the facing on both sides of this section. (This will make the garment fabric seem a little full until it has been turned and pressed, but will prevent the facing from showing at the edges as it is likely to do if you keep the edges even.) Measure your ⅝ inch seam allowance from the facing, not the garment side.

4. Grade and clip your seams (for the inner curved areas). Turn the front strap right side out and slip this into the back shoulder strap which is still unturned. The right sides of the shoulders (front and back) will be together. Stitch the shoulder seam, press seam open. Next, machine stitch the facing seams together at the shoulder and press open.



5. Pull the finished strap out still further so that you may continue stitching each side of the strap (over the shoulder area that you left open originally). Grade these seams and pull back through to the right side of garment. You will find a perfect finish each time. It's almost like magic and if you've struggled with this detail before, it will seem like a dream come true. (If you can't understand all of this by reading it, save it until you will actually be doing this construction, then follow each step carefully and I can guarantee that it will work!)

Mrs. Olivia Cash of Florissant, Mo., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for this suggestion.

For those of us who like snug-fitting belts, but do not like them to be binding—remove the belt from the buckle. Cut away the portion that was cut out to fit the prong of the buckle and sew about 2 inches of elastic to this cut end. Next, follow the same procedure as was used originally at this end of belt.

The elastic need not be a matching color. This portion of the belt will be hidden when worn. The belt will practically breathe with you! (Also, if a belt is too short, as sometimes happens with stout people, you can adapt this method to lengthen the belt and make it more comfortable at the same time.)

DEAR EUNICE:

How does one prevent a stretched neckline? My necklines all seem to have a slight flare to them and then gap out in front.—MRS. M. M. E.

DEAR MRS. M. M. E.:

The easiest way to prevent a stretched neckline is to cut the interfacing out of a firm, closely woven fabric the same size as the neck facing. Immediately baste it to the wrong side of your garment at the neckline, front and back. This will retain the shape of the neckline, and it should never stretch out of shape after that.

Why Restlessness Is On The Increase

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—California women were told they are growing increasingly restless, and were challenged to find out why.

The challenge came from Miss Ruth Miller of Los Angeles, chairman of the California Advisory Commission on the Status of Women. She delivered the keynote address to a conference on California women at San Francisco State College last week.

She said in prepared remarks that "women are suffering from profound restlessness in the United States." Miss Miller explained that she did not refer to general concern over civil rights war and automation which affect both men and women.

"The restlessness of which I speak has its core in the changes that are taking place in the role of women," she added. No longer, she said, is a woman the property of man and nothing but a housekeeper and mother.

"Female tasks have changed radically . . . We no longer spin cloth . . . few of us bake bread, a decreasing number do much sewing as a basic responsibility."

What must be determined, the speaker said, is "whether the restlessness of which we speak is in an important way related to new-found freedom from the time-consuming duties of the past."

The unrest, she said, "generally does not appear to apply to the employed woman, particularly that great number who are both employed and homemakers." Instead, Miss Miller continued, it applies to two kinds of women:

"The woman in her mid-30s or mid-40s whose children are grown or growing and who has had training either at a professional or non-professional level.

"Then, there are the others, who never really were too involved in anything, never went very far in the field of education, and perhaps never even worked. They seem to be unable to channel their activities and their way of life, when home responsibilities diminish. Women such as these may account for the restlessness of women in this society today."

Orth-Johnson Vows Are Exchanged

Mrs. Alice E. Johnson of San Rafael exchanged wedding vows with William A. Orth in a Nov. 19 ceremony at the First Presbyterian Church of San Rafael attended by family members and close friends only. The Rev. Wesley C. Baker officiated.

The bride wore an ice blue two-piece dress with beaded collar and royal blue accessories. Her daughter, Mrs. Leonard Volker of Petaluma was matron of honor, wearing a green sheath dress.

John D. Groff of Novato, the bride's son, was the best man and Leonard Volker ushered.

Vacations And Parties

By MOLLY MARIN

Connie, who is active in the League of Women Voters of Southern Marin, is especially interested in government and since she speaks Spanish was able to talk with the people they met. After stopping in Mexico City the Richardsons went on to Guatamala City, which they found in turmoil. There were men with guns everywhere in the streets with frequent shots heard, Connie said. Guerrillas apparently were trying to take over the government, she believes.

Though there had been no publicity, they learned that one of the United States military men had been killed on the main street and his body was being flown out when they went to the airport to continue their trip to Costa Rica.

Conditions there were completely different with considerable freedom, Connie reported. At San Jose when she attended two masses in the cathedral, also present were the president, Professor Jose Trejos-Fernandez and his wife, who smiled at her and permitted her to take their pictures.

Another memorable experience was their visit to a volcano. From a high point they were able to see both the Caribbean and Pacific Oceans.

MRS. J. E. BARDWELL is giving a cocktail party tonight at her home in Sausalito to introduce her future daughter-in-law Nancy Ellen Peterson of Quincy, to family friends. The party will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. Nancy will become the bride of Ross L. Bardwell of Sausalito on June 16.

ENTERTAINING AT cocktails and a buffet tonight at their Azalea Drive home in Mill Valley are the Leonard Asianos. Guests will include Messrs. and Mesdames Walter Brown, Paul Camera, Niles Fleming, Van Sargent, Edward Dill, Pablo Saavedra, Louis Bartolini, Charles Gregory, Richard Schoenberger and Bart Grimes all of Mill Valley, William Asiano, William Moriarity and George Pellegrini of Tiburon and Joseph Asiano and William Walsh, San Rafael.

MR. AND MRS. Richard F. Laws of Novato entertained at a formal dinner party for eight Tuesday evening at their home in Novato honoring Commissioner Misra of India. Mr. Misra, commissioner of labor for the state of Delhi, was accompanied by Delhi Deputy Commissioner of Labor Waghray. They have just completed a six months' tour of this country studying United States labor techniques.

A SURPRISE DINNER party last Sunday marked the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Lombardi of Greenbrae. Their children, Marilyn and Bob hosted the event which was attended by friends and relatives.

VACATIONING AT the Santa Barbara Biltmore in Santa Barbara were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Maroevich of San Rafael.

A HOUSEWARMING LAST Sunday welcomed Mr. and Mrs. Douglas O'Hair to their new home on Paradise Cay. Twenty-five yachting friends of the couple surprised the O'Hairs with a built-in party, beginning with brunch. In on the planning were Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Peterson of Belvedere, Dr. and Mrs. Nicholas Pederson of Paradise Cove, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Potter of Mill Valley.

MRS. MARIE LE DOUX, an Oklahoma City mother of two sons, displays the record and illustrated alphabet of her Play 'N Talk" phonic or alphabet system. Mrs. Le Doux is producer of the two-part phonics course which teaches a child to learn each letter by its sound.

Phonic Or Alphabetical System A Method Of Teaching Reading

By PATRICIA ZINN

A method of teaching reading that is finding popularity with educators and parents alike is the phonic or alphabetical method wherein a child learns each letter by its sounds.

Producer of the two-part phonics course which is entitled "Play N' Talk," is Mrs. Marie Le Doux, an Oklahoma City mother of two sons.

Mrs. Le Doux produces the two-part course consisting of five long playing records and accompanying manuals with the help of the principal and teachers of the Buckley Schools in Southern California.

A former resident of Hollywood, Mrs. Le Doux discovered the "magic" system when her sons entered the Buckley School and began to rattle off extremely difficult words with the greatest of ease.

THIS "LOOK AND SAY" method requires that a child memorize the shape of an entire word and associate this shape with a spoken word. The course is divided into two parts (Series I and II) which an average 6-year-old youngster can complete in six weeks. Music for the recordings was written by William Marx, son of the late Harpo Marx, and a Walt Disney artist drew the manual illustrations.

Marie Le Doux is a firm believer that parents should not worry about college but concentrate on a basic sound education for children while in the lower grades.

IN THE STORES for Christmas giving is a new "Play 'N Talk" game by Parker Bros. In the same vein as monopoly, the game can be played by four people and has 250 titles and a long playing record.

Information on "Play 'N Talk" for teachers and parents may be obtained by writing Play 'N Talk, Box 804, Dept. J., Oklahoma City, Okla. The child's age and grade should be stipulated when writing.

Few Complaints Against Dredge Permit Extension

A Sausalito firm's application for a three-year extension of its permit to continue dredging off Angel Island drew only three objections by last Monday's deadline for filing complaints, the Army Corps of Engineers reported yesterday.

The application was filed by United Sand and Gravel Division of A. G. Schoonmaker Co. for removing approximately 350,000 cubic yards of material to a maximum depth of 60 feet below mean low water near the island's southwest side.

The three objections, all from Sausalito residents, either expressed fear the material would be used for fill in the bay or complained of the use of public resources for private profit.

A spokesman for the Corps of Engineers said the firm pays between $10,500 and $14,000 in royalties to the state. A decision will not be made on extension of the permit until the State Resources Agency submits its findings to the engineers.

Santa To Sail Into Tiburon Tomorrow

Santa Claus will arrive in Tiburon by boat tomorrow at 12:30 p.m. to host a pre-Christmas children's party until 4 p.m. A motorized sleigh will carry children on trips through the Main Street shopping area.

The event has been arranged by the Main Street Merchants Assn. Main Street will be closed to automobile traffic all day. Any vehicles left on Main Street tomorrow morning will be towed away, announced City Mgr. Lawrence D. Rose.

Business was chosen as first choice for a career by only 3 per cent of the men and almost none of the women with very high National Merit Scholarship test scores who entered college two years ago.

Yule Concerts Planned For San Anselmo

Two Music-for-Christmas concerts will be presented in December at the First Presbyterian Church of San Anselmo.

The first will be an organ recital of four Christmas hymns on Dec. 4 by Wilbur F. Russell featuring the German chorale "Vom Himmel Hoch" in two settings and J. S. Bach's canonic variations. The other hymns will be "Greensleeves" in two settings, "In Dulce Jubilo" in a setting by Marcel Dupre and three treatments by J. S. Bach; and "A French Noel" in Dupre's variations.

On Dec. 11 Marin Pro Musica will present "Music for Christmas." Monteverdi's "Magnificat" will be sung with organ, as well as three 16th century Spanish and three medieval English carols, and Russell will play noels of Daquin on the organ.

This program will be repeated on Dec. 18 at the Palace of the Legion of Honor in San Francisco with Ludwig Altman as organist.

MASTERPIECE DISAPPOINTS

Mrs. Eva Savage worries about the fate of her Old Master painting in the famed Christie's auction rooms in London. The Reubens' work, "The Judgement of Paris," was withdrawn from sale yesterday when bidders would offer only $70,560 for the painting, previously valued at as much as $280,000. Mrs. Savage's late husband Robert, a picture framer, unwittingly bought the painting in 1933, among a shipment of scrap frames from New York.

Colorful Christmas Stamp Draws Fire, Is Defended

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Post Office is bracing itself for an expected onrush of customers eager to purchase what may be its best-selling, most controversial and certainly most colorful Christmas stamp.

The five-color stamp, a reproduction of Flemish Renaissance painter Hans Memling's "Madonna and Child with Angels," went on sale Nov. 1 at Christmas, Mich.

A spokesman for the American Civil Liberties Union said, "The stamp has a religious motif — a Christian motif — and it therefore is a governmental means of showing preference for a single religion. . .clearly a preferential governmental aid in propagating a religious faith."

The Post Office official line is that the stamp celebrates a famed work of art. And, as with any Christmas stamp, its real purpose is to have Christmas card mailers pay five cents per card — the Christmas stamp costs five cents — rather than send them under a four-cent rate.

But Postmaster Gen. Lawrence F. O'Brien is known to have told representatives of seven influential Jewish organizations at a hitherto unreported meeting that — as a spokesman said — "he was not going to be a hypocrite.

"He was not going to issue a Christmas stamp and claim it was divorced from religion — from the true meaning of Christmas."

Corte Maderan Pleads Guilty Of Child Neglect

A Corte Madera man pleaded guilty in Marin Municipal Court yesterday to neglecting and beating his 4-year-old son.

Judge Peter Allen Smith scheduled sentencing of Douglass Ross Davison, 22, of 1441 Casa Buena Drive, for 3 p.m. on Dec. 20.

Davison's wife, Virginia E. Romm Davison, 22, a co-defendant in the case, was arraigned and is to enter plea at 1:30 p.m. Monday.

Both were released on their own recognizances.

Davison, an offset pressman, was accused of beating the child, Wesley, with his hand and burning him with a cigarette lighter in November. Mrs. Davison is charged with neglect.

India is constructing a training center in the use of satellite communications which will double as a satellite tracking station.

DECEMBER'S STARS

Two Planets Glitter Each Evening

By JAMES STOKLEY
Science Service

Two planets that are visible during December evenings add their brilliance to the bright stars on view at this time of year.

Jupiter, largest of the planets, rises about three hours after sunset at the beginning of the month. Then it becomes easily visible low in the eastern sky. Not far away, toward the right, you will see Sirius, the dog-star, brightest of all the stars visible at night. However, it is only about one-half as bright as Jupiter. Its scintillating brilliance also makes it easy to distinguish from the brighter plant with its steady glow.

The other evening planet, considerably fainter than Jupiter, is Saturn. It is in the southwest, near Pisces, the fishes.

Around Jupiter and Sirius are the other bright stars that make the skies of a winter evening so glorious. These are shown on the accompanying maps, which depict the skies as they look about 10 p.m., your own kind of standard time, on Dec. 1. They look the same on the 15th at 9 p.m., and at the month's end an hour earlier than that.

Just above Jupiter is the constellation of Gemini, the twins, with the stars Castor and Pollux. To their right is Orion, the warrior. This constellation contains two bright stars, named Betelgeuse and Rigel. Between them is a row of three stars that marks Orion's belt.

Below Orion stands Canis Major, the greater dog, of which Sirius is part. The lesser dog, Canis Minor, is toward the left, and a little higher. In it is the star called Procyon. Above Orion is Taurus, the bull, with brilliant and ruddy Aldebaran. Next to Taurus, toward the left, is the star Capella, part of Auriga, the charioteer. (This appears on the map of the northern sky.)

Low in the northwest is Vega, part of Lyra, the lyre. At the times for which the maps are drawn, Vega is close to the horizon, and not nearly so bright as it was a few months ago, when it shone high in the evening sky. When a star is so low, its light travels a much longer path through the atmosphere than when it is higher. More light is absorbed, and hence the star appears fainter.

Cygnus, the swan, is above and to the left of Vega. Here is the star Deneb, which is also dimmed. In the northest is Ursa Major, the great bear, also near the horizon. Here is the Big Dipper, now placed too near the horizon to be fully observed.

In Ursa Minor, to the left, is Polaris, the pole star.

In Perseus is the famous variable star called Algol, which is really two bodies orbiting around each other. One is much brighter than the other. As the dark one partially hides the brighter, at intervals of about 2 days 21 hours, the star becomes considerably dimmer than normal.

As for the other naked-eye planets, Venus has now passed the sun and is to the east of it. Thus, it has become an evening star, standing low in the west just after sunset. It is still so close to the sun, however, that it is hard to locate until early in 1967.

Mars rises a little after midnight, in the constellation of Virgo, the virgin. It will remain visible, about the same brightness as Saturn dut distinctly red, the rest of the night. Mercury will be farthest west of the sun on Dec. 4. For a few days about then, it should be visible low in the southeast as dawn is breaking.

If you look at Saturn this month, particularly on the night of Dec. 17, you will not see the rings, even through a good-sized telescope. The ring-system, which is composed of three main parts, has an outside diameter of 171,000 miles.

But the system, really a swarm of myriads of tiny satellites that cannot be distinguished individually as observed from earth, is very thin, less than 10 miles. Thus, when the earth moves precisely into the plane of the rings, as it does this month, and we view them edgewise, the rings seem to disappear.

In 1965, and for about 14 years before that, the northern side of the rings was presented to earthly view. About 1959 we saw the rings opened out to their greatest extent. Then as earth moved out of the plane of rings the band narrowed, until the rings were edgewise on April 2 of this year. The southern surface began to be visible. But, on Oct. 29, the earth's motion had brought it back into the plane of the rings, and again they were edgewise. What little we could see of them, in November, was again of the northern side.

This month the earth again crosses the plane of the rings. After Dec. 17 we will see the southern side of Saturn again. During 1967 the earth will continue moving away from the ring plane, until July 21, when we start moving toward it. On Dec. 4, 1967, we will approach the plane of rings, but not be precisely in it. The next time we will view the rings edgewise will be in 1980.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Hysterectomy, While Major Surgery, Has Low Death Rate

VAN DELLEN

Hysterectomy is a major operation, but it is so well established most women are back home in 10 days. Furthermore, the mortality rate is extremely low. In one series of 2,000 cases in which the procedure was done for different conditions including hemorrhage and cancer, only four failed to survive. The technique varies and in some instances the entire uterus is removed. This operation usually is recommended only as a lifesaving measure for women in the childbearing age or before the change of life.

FOR WOMEN beyond this age it is suggested more often nowadays for disorders that formerly were treated 'conservatively. This new attitude is justifiable because many minor operations fail to correct an abnormality and a hysterectomy is necessary ultimately. In one group more than one-third of the hysterectomies were done on women who had undergone other types of pelvic surgery which failed to bring relief.

There are many indications for removing the uterus but the most common is for the elimination of fibroids that are growing or producing excessive bleeding or pain.

Endometriosis, the second most common reason for removing the uterus, results when some of the menstrual flow passes backward into the abdominal cavity via the fallopian tubes. The ensuing irritation creates so much distress that something must be done. During surgery not only are the irritated tissues eliminated but the source of trouble, the uterus and ovaries.

HYSTERECTOMY also is performed when there is a mechanical defect such as prolapse (fallen uterus), ovarian cyst, or pelvic infection that cannot be controlled with medicine. It is also done when the uterus harbors cancer. Now and then hysterectomy is considered an emergency measure to control excessive bleeding.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

BLOATING WITH ULCER

Mrs. J. S. writes: My husband has a duodenal ulcer and suffers from gas. Is this the usual thing with ulcer?

REPLY

This depends upon what is meant by gas. Most victims are bothered by indigestion which creates a feeling as though gas had accumulated and that a good belch or two would give relief.

BLADDER INFECTION

REPLY

Today such infections are easy to manage, thanks to the antibiotics and other urinary antiseptics. Some persons call every infection, including inflammation of the urinary bladder, a cold.

ACCIDENT HANGOVER

REPLY

Accidents are disturbing and time usually takes care of neurosis of this nature. If not, the help of a psychiatrist may be needed.

PROFILE OF A WORM

REPLY

The female is round, white, and less than one-fourth of an inch long. She is almost twice as large as the male.

PULSE RATE IN CANCER

J.J. writes: Is a fast pulse associated with cancer?

REPLY

Indirectly, especially when the malignancy becomes infected and fever ensues.

TODAY'S HEALTH HINT — Not every runny nose is a cold; it may be an allergy.

Peace Corps Draftee Says He Won't Fight In War

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Fred S. Lonidier, a Peace Corps volunteer drafter while in the Philippines, told newsmen when he arrived in San Francisco last night that he could not "in good conscience fight as a member of the Armed Forces in Viet Nam."

Lonidier, 24, said in Manila earlier this week that he had picketed as a member of the Viet Nam Day Committee at San Francisco State College. He added, however, that his political views were not at issue in the draft situation.

He said he hasn't yet decided what he will do about his scheduled induction.

A member of his home draft board in Oroville, Calif., has said Lonidier joined the Peace Corps to avoid the draft, a charge he has denied.

Determined Youth Travels Long Way To Save His Canine Friend

By M. ELIZABETH JOHNSTON

Is a dog man's best friend, or in a boy a dog's best friend?

A dog in Tiburon knows he has a real friend in Eric Edward Blackford, 14. Eric and Ringo are home today at 8 Felipe Court with Eric's mother, Mrs. Jacqueline A. Parnell, and stepfather Edward Parnell, a captain in the Tiburon fire department.

But a week ago yesterday Eric and the little dog (he's mostly Beagle) disappeared from home after Eric's parents had told him they might have to find another home for Ringo because he had been nipping neighborhood children.

Eric left a note under his bedspread, telling his parents he had gone away to find a home for the dog. Next he went to Corte Madera and withdrew money from his savings account. Then he and Ringo went by taxicab to the San Francisco International Airport, where Eric purchased a round-trip ticket to Honolulu on Pan-American Airways for $75 and paid $8 extra to have the dog shipped on the same flight.

It wasn't until Eric was airborne at 8 p.m. that he learned his dog would have to go into a quarantine cage in Honolulu for four months.

On arrival, Eric went to the home of his aunt, Mrs. Sally Hofmeister, who notified his parents of his arrival there.

Checking on the quarantine problem, the Parnells learned that Eric could re-enter California without having to put the dog into quarantine at this end. Eric then agreed to bring Ringo home.

Thanksgiving dinner at the Parnell home was postponed until yesterday to include Eric and Ringo, who arrived at the airport at 1:30 a.m.

Mrs. Parnell, who was a member of Tiburon's first city council, said yesterday she was shopping for a muzzle to curb Ringo's nipping propensities, but would still have to look for another home for the dog. She said Ringo's nature had been transformed when he was lost for a week in Belvedere and apparently was mistreated by children. "He is more suitable now as a pet for an adult or a couple who want a watchdog," she added.

Ringo distinguished himself when Tiburon was a brand new city by appearing several times during city council meetings, which were held in Del Mar, close to the Parnell home.

New Telephone Conduit Begins For Sausalito

Work began this week on Bridgeway in Sausalito to add a nine-duct telephone conduit between San Carlos Avenue and El Portal.

The new conduit will supplement a four-duct wooden conduit placed in 1915, said P. W. Tibbetts, manager of Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. for southern Marin. Temporary pavement will be laid within 30 days, he said.

The new conduit will allow for growth of the area for 30 to 40 years, Tibbetts said. Contractor for the $20,000 project is Baldwin Construction Co. of Marysville.

Fencing Due For Mud Trap Near School

Efforts will be made to fence off the acres of mud and slime — considered dangerous to children of John MacPhail School in Santa Venetia—early next month, Phillip B. Lygren, engineer for the land owners, said yesterday.

An order has been placed for about 1,700 feet of mesh fencing, five feet high, and this should be in place during week beginning Dec. 5, he said.

The longest stretch of fence will be between the school and the mud which last month was cited as a potential hazard to the children and others venturing on to the thin crust.

The Independent-Journal spotlighted the problem Nov. 3 and the Marin County Health Department began talks with Lygren, representing the owners, International Investment Co. of San Francisco.

Lygren said yesterday the fencing will also go up where nearby streets abutt on the mud. These streets will include La Playa, Palmara and Estancia Way.

"The fencing will not be placed between the mud and Gallinas Creek as the channel provides a big enough hazard itself," said Lygren.

DEER LIFT!

Bare-handed capture of buck deer.

A serious problem in the Everglades of Florida was created this summer by an overly-bountiful Mother Nature. A record-shattering rainfall deluged the region and caused heavy flooding in the 914-square-mile area comprising the Central and Southern Florida Flood Control District.

Normally, the use of pumping stations and floodgates in the region is sufficient to control deep-water situations. But, this past summer, normal safeguards could not cope with the massive rainfall.

The area, lying partly within the tropical zone, has one of the most nearly-level landscapes in the world. Eight species of palm trees flourish here. Alligators inhabit the swamplands, and the manatee frequent brackish rivers. Other land mammals abound: deer, cougar, bobcat, black bear, otter, oppossum and raccoon. Among the snakes: king, tree, coral, water moccasin and rattler. Birdlife adds exquisite color, with: heron, egret, bittern, ibis, frigate, gallinule, eagle, kite, anhinga and roseate spoonbill.

The Florida Game and Fresh Water Commission operated a deer lift to get these sensitive, frightened creatures onto higher, drier land. Despite the yeoman efforts of both state and Federal agencies, unfortunately, some of the deer were still lost.

Members of the Half-Track Clubs of Broward, Dade, and Palm Beach Counties, in Florida, searched the Everglades in their airboats. Spotting the helplessly stranded deer, mired in the high-water areas, was aided by radio contact with the Game Commission's overhead helicopter.

As the individual deer would be spotted, the plan-of-action was to have an airboat dispatched to the sighted area. After locating the animal, the men would capture it, tranquilize it, bind its hooves, haul it up out of the marshes into the boat, and transport the deer to higher ground.

Sadly, some of the deer died of shock and fright, while they were being "saved". The healthier animals, safely carried from the airboats to the protection and forage of higher, drier ground, were cut loose to run free.

U.S. Troops In Germany Failing To Make Friends

HISTORIANS SEEM largely agreed that the actions of the victorious World War I allies at Versailles set the stage for Hitler and World War II.

Now that news dispatches bring word of an apparent rise of a new nationalist party in West Germany, many fear that a new Naziism is in the making.

All the concerns voiced by breathless commentators are based on less than 29,000 votes cast in last Sunday's Bavarian parliament elections where the total vote was about 390,000. By comparison, West Germany's total population is around 60 million.

The Bavarian parliament has 204 seats. The new National Democratic Party captured 15.

Thus all the concern being voiced is based on less than seven and one-half per cent of the vote in one state election.

OF THE 28 TO 29 thousand who voted for the new nationalist party's candidates, perhaps 20 per cent (about 6,000) are former Nazis. The remaining 80 per cent are critics of West Germany's government (Erhard and, before him, Adenauer) and the established political parties in power.

These critics find fault with continuing allied occupation more than two decades after the end of World War II, importation of "creap" labor to ease the acute labor shortage (many come from Italy), subservience to the U.S.A. in foreign affairs and heavy American investment in (and subsequent control of) West German industry.

Some of the new National Democratic Party members voice resentment of the unending burden of guilt imposed upon Germans for the Jewish exterminations and other Nazi inhumanity. West Germany still must make reparations payments to Israel.

It is easy for Germans to point to American extermination of the Indians and suppression of Negroes and ask why perpetual guilt is imposed on Germans and not on Americans.

DOES ALL OF THIS mean that the Germans are on the verge of a new nationalistic movement which could lead ultimately to World War III?

If you spend some time traveling the rural countrysides of Germany today, talking with ordinary people, it is hard to believe that they could make the Hitler mistake all over again. They are too intelligent, too well off and by nature too friendly. It is hard to imagine them wanting to make war against anybody ever again.

Most Germans with whom you talk are tolerant of occupation problems. They recognize that U.S. soldier misbehavior is the work of only a few and they do not blame America in general or the occupation forces as a whole.

But there is one point on which they are sensitive.

They regard American occupation forces as personally unfriendly.

"They don't accept invitations to our homes. They don't invite us to their homes. They frown on their children playing with our children. Our children are not welcome at their children's playgrounds or homes."

These are the comments you hear from Germans.

In Munich, 3,000 American teenagers attend the American high school —segregating themselves from German teen-agers.

"Why don't you want to associate with us?" ask the friendly, hospitable Germans, in a tone of voice that betrays an inner hurt.

When critics say the only reason America has aided Germans is because it serves America's purposes against communism, a hospitable German, hurt because his hospitality and desire for personal friendships with Americans has been shunned, may agree with the criticism.

IF OUR ARMED FORCES occupying Germany for the past two decades have registered any failures, they would be in the area of personal contact.

This, obviously, is most regrettable.

It isn't too late to be trying to do something about reform.

Unfortunately, in recent times our leaders and our bureaucrats think too much in terms of solving problems by spending money. They have not placed sufficient emphasis on the people-to-people approach.

The Peace Corps is an effort to provide help on a more personal basis.

If our occupation forces in Germany would only absorb some Peace Corps doctrines and practice them, pjeople-to-people, we could be sure of Germany's enduring friendship and not have to fear the rise of a dangerous new anti-American nationalism there.

And the astisfactions of people-to-people friendships are their own reward.

The Melancholy Days Are Come

November seems to us to be Marin's melancholy month, if a place so blessed with natural beauty can ever be said to be melancholy.

Dark mornings, with brooding nimbo-stratus clouds lurking just beyond the horizon, loaded with buckets of seemingly never-ending rain. This is our mind's eye portrait of November, usually the beginning of six months of intermittent rain.

Of course, it isn't too bad; intermittent rain means intermittent sunshine also. And we have a few warm, patio-life days, even in January.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BRICKBATS to dog and cat thieves who prey on innocent pets and sell them for profit to research laboratories.

BOUQUETS to Marin law enforcement agencies for joint action in trapping two escaped jail inmates, who had knidnaped a taxi-driver and held a family hostage in Sleepy Hollow. And a BOUQUET to Mrs. Arthur Jorgensen for wrangling an excuse to leave home and phoning the sheriff's office.

BOUQUETS to the railroad and its contractors for the commendable manner in which they kept traffic flowing during the railroad tunnel reconstruction at the north end of Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael.

BRICKBATS to two young thieves who stole $6,000 worth of ski equipment from a Sausalito store, but BOUQUETS to the same pair for expressing remorse and returning the entire loot intact, plus $11 for repair of a window broken during the burglary.

FINDS VICTIM IS HIS SON

A doctor, summoned to treat a little boy hit by a truck in Des Moines, Iowa, was shocked to discover that the child was his own son.

It would astonish any of us, in rushing to the assistance of a person in trouble, to discover that he is not a stranger but one's own flesh and blood or a close friend.

The more we see in every person God's holy image, and recognize that we are all children of one Father, the more alert we will be to the needs of all people regardless of who, where or what they are.

We add new and richer meaning to our lives in the same proportion that we realize that in serving others, we are serving the Lord.

"As long as you did it to one of the least of these My brethren, you did it to Me."

School Extends Writer Invitation

Editor, Independent-Journal:

In my opinion the biased reports you have published regarding the players, the coaches, and the staff of Terra Linda High School have been written for two reasons: (1) you are trying to gain or lose readers, and (2) you are trying to degrade a fine school with an outstanding academic and athletic program.

I can overlook the first reason; the second reason, I will not. Before you write another word about our so-called 'killers," I suggest—if you can muster enough courage to do so—that you please visit our school. I shall be happy to arrange an interview between you and each individual involved in your slanted reporting. I shall also try to explain to you the academic achievements and the fine records these personable young men have compiled at Terra Linda.

Route 17 Road To Nowhere

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Been reading with interest all this fuss about Route 17.

To my way of thinking this freeway is a road to nowhere. All these various routes over hills thru backyards (the other fellow's) to the metropolis of Nicasio! . . . Why? to see the quaint church or the buffalos in the pastures?

It it's to get the out of county visitors to the National Seashore Park why can't they route the freeway by way of Stinson-Bolinas area. Or if it's to get the Valley people over there, route it over existing routes from Petaluma or Novato. I'm sure Marin's citizens can find their way up there on existing routes that the freeway seems to forget are there.

If the freeway is to take the traffic load off the Ross Valley area, the logical way is to open up the Sleepy Hollow route to Terra Linda and 101. This way the 6,000 cars that come out of Sleepy Hollow would be on 101 and into San Francisco, San Rafael or Oakland a lot quicker. Puerto Hill and the San Rafael overpass bottleneck would have to be removed by the adding of several lanes to accommodate the extra cars.

Of course being the 'logical way' we'll never see it done. So as everyone else is saying . . . "Put it somewhere else, not through my yard." . . .

Writer Objects To Tax Proposal

Editor, Independent-Journal:

. . . A statewide initiative petition is now being circulated statewide by a Southern California organization known as "OUCH." This petition would set a limit of 1 per cent of the full cash value that could be levied by all taxing agencies, local, school, city and county, for property taxation.

This means that each county would have to stand on its own botton—1 per cent of the full cash value of all property in the county is all they could raise by means of property taxation. In our opinion this would mean ruin financially for some 30, at least, smaller counties of the state, where other sources of taxation for revenue producing purposes is very moderate. As an example take Marin County — at full cash value the total property tax base would probably be around one billion eight hundred million dollars and 1 per cent of this would be $18,000,000, leaving some $20,000,000 of the total county budget to be raised by other means. The State Board of Equalization is now taxing a sales base in Marin County of some $260,000,000 and to raise the above $20,000,000 it would take around an 8 per cent sales tax-which would be ruinous to business in general. Not only that, but under the present sales tax distributing system, the cities where the business is done receives practically all of the 1 per cent county sales taxes now levied—San Rafael with some one-seventh of the population in the county receives around 40 per cent or more of the total county sales taxes.

Under this proposed initiative petition take a home valued at a total market value of $25,000—1 per cent of this would be $250. Add to this 8 per cent of perhaps $5000 spent yearly on taxable sales items, this would be $400. Add this $400 and the 1 per cent ($250) and this homeowner would be paying $650 yearly in taxes—He would be no better off than he is now and would be more apt to spend more for taxes than under the present system of property taxation.

We would again make the statement that the one and only way in which property taxes can be reduced by 50 per cent—is on a statewide basis where all of the local budgets, schools, cities and counties, are sent in to a central state collection agency and put in one pot—Then levy a general sales or use of all commodities or services sufficient to meet all these budgets. We are certain a 3½ per cent levy would be more than sufficient. . . .

Black Point For Route 17

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I believe the new route for the new Highway 17 to Point Reyes should be from Black Point cutoff straight to Point Reyes. This would disturb less houses and businesses and be the fastest route. When aquiring rightaway for this road, enough should be acquired for rapid transit.

To relieve the traffic in the San Anselmo area a county road should be put in from Whites Hill to Lucas Valley Road, Butterfield Road and Manuel Freitas Road could be connected into this.

Another road should be built from North San Pedro Road by the Civic Center through Los Ranchitos, over the ridge, and come out by the Sunny Hills School in San Anselmo. This would give people in San Anselmo a direct route to Highway 101.

AT A COUNTRY CLUB, a member came over to the owner of the city's most prosperous newspaper and told him, "Say, I owe you a vote of thanks. Your paper proved just the thing to stop my kids from raising a racket while I was trying to sleep a little longer Saturday morning." "I'm glad to hear that," boomed the publisher, highly pleased. "Which particular story or feature did the trick?"

"Oh, it was nothing IN the paper," the member hastened to explain. "I just rolled it up and whacked them with it."

ON NEW Year's Day, 1945, recalls Stanley Weintraub, W. Somerset Maugham, then on the eve of his seventy-first birthday (but destined to live another full score years) listened reluctantly to a chorus of merrymakers singing "Auld Lang Syne." When they chorused the line "Should old acquaintance be forgot," Maugham snarled, "I can only tell you that my own answer is in the affirmative."

ROSCOE DRUMMOND

GOP Congressman Will Take Positive Legislative Approach

WASHINGTON—The Republican leadership is acting quickly to avoid obstruction for its own sake in the new Congress. Good.

House GOP Leader Gerald Ford of Michigan is laying it down as official policy in a personal letter to the 47 new Republican congressmen that the GOP does not intend to confront President Johnson with do-nothing obstruction.

The tactic of the strengthened House Republicans will be to use their power to reshape Great Society measures and thus to get legislation passed, not blocked.

IF THE PRESIDENT is prepared to meet the GOP halfway, as he says he is, then there is good prospect that the new Congress, while more conservative, will be productive.

Representative Ford, more secure in his leadership because he helped so many new congressmen get elected, put it to his colleagues that in order to win in the future the Republicans must meet national problems head-on, not neglect them. This is what he said:

"The prospects of winning Congress and the presidency in 1968 are going to be largely shaped by what the Republican members of the Congress do during the sessions of 1967 and 1968.

"THE REPUBLICAN leadership in the House of Representatives intends to present to Congress constructive Republican answers to the most pressing national problems. We are not going to be just nay-sayers and ought not to be. We intend to be yea-sayers for what is best for America.

"I note already that Mr. Johnson is talking about giving heed to Republican views. He said in Texas on Nov. 13: 'I anticipate that we will try to enlist the support of both parties.' The President is facing the reality created by your election and that of the other new Republican members of the House.

"We shall oppose some of the proposals of the administration, but we shall not make a record of indiscriminate opposition. We shall try to improve some of the proposals offered by the administration. Above all we shall aim to make our record by constructive Republican proposals."

THIS IS A valuable and needed step ahead in GOP policy and strategy. Twice in the past 30 years the Republicans have used their temporarily strengthened position in Congress primarily as an instrument of obstruction and each time they have suffered from it.

They opposed almost all of the New Deal and began losing Congress thereafter. After taking both houses of Congress in 1946, the Republicans blocked President Truman's domestic measures at nearly every point and began losing again two years later.

This is the kind of mistake which Representative Ford has wisely determined to avoid and in doing so he has the full support of the top GOP leaders—Reps. Melvin Laird of Wisconsin, chairman of the Republican Conference, and Charles Goodell of New York, head of the Committee on Planning and Research. Sens. Everett Dirksen of Illinois and Thomas Kuchel of California are taking the same line in the Senate.

This means three things:

The Republicans will offer a GOP "State of the Union" message, matching the President's proposals with their own.

THERE WILL BE no scattershot opposition to the White House programs but a real effort to reshape Johnson measures in the Republican mold.

There will be no organized Republican coalition with southern Democratic conservatives. The GOP leaders will welcome southern support for their measures but will foster no coalition against the President.

Obviously a good letter does not guarantee good performance. It will take constructive compromise by both the President and the Republicans to turn prospective stalemate into acceptable legislation.

TO BE EQUAL

Sophisticated Rights Approach

By WHITNEY M. YOUNG Jr.

I HAVE recently returned from a two-week tour of five East European nations — Hungary, Rumania, Czechoslovakia, Poland and Yugoslavia.

While the trip to these far-away nations was interesting and informative, my basic reason for interrupting my busy schedule to make it was the chance for informal talks with my fellow tour members.

They were 26 of the nation's most important business leaders; the chief executives of companies employing a total of about two million workers and contributing a large share of the nation's industrial production.

These are the men who are in a position to materially improve the economic situation of the nation, and of course, Negro citizens, both through the jobs they have at their disposal, and through the great influence they wield in the councils of industry.

I AM GLAD to report that this phase of the trip was very successful. I found these business leaders to be extremely well informed and quite sympathetic to the great efforts needed to bring equality of opportunity to Negro citizens.

They recognized that discrimination has kept Negro citizens in serious economic difficulties and they are sophisticated enough to understand that they can bring about some of the needed changes.

It was heartening to find that these energetic and successful men had no use for the racism behind the "white backlash" and that they were truly concerned about increasing the role America's great corporations must play in expanding opportunities for Negroes and other minorities.

I WAS GLAD that I went, too, because I feel very strongly that Negroes must be part of any large group travelling abroad and meeting government leaders and other persons. America is a multi-racial country whose great strength is its diversity of peoples and this should be reflected in every such group we send abroad, even such an unofficial, private tour as ours was.

I was also anxious to gain a better understanding of east-west relations which affect all Americans. In each of the countries we visited, I found the same themes running through our conversations with government leaders.

They all share a sincere concern over the war in Viet Nam, and fear the possibility that it may escalate into another world war, a horror they have already lived through and never again want to see.

The emotional scars of the last war are still evident in their fear of a reunited Germany and in their fear that Germany will gain access to nuclear arms. The Nazi "master race" theories resulted in mass murder and the destruction of their coutries and they never again want to have a powerful Germany on their borders.

THEY ARE ALL trying to improve living standards for their people and are willing to abandon doctrinaire Communism to do it. I was most impressed with the apartment building activities I saw. They are also pegging rents at a general standard of about 10 per cent.

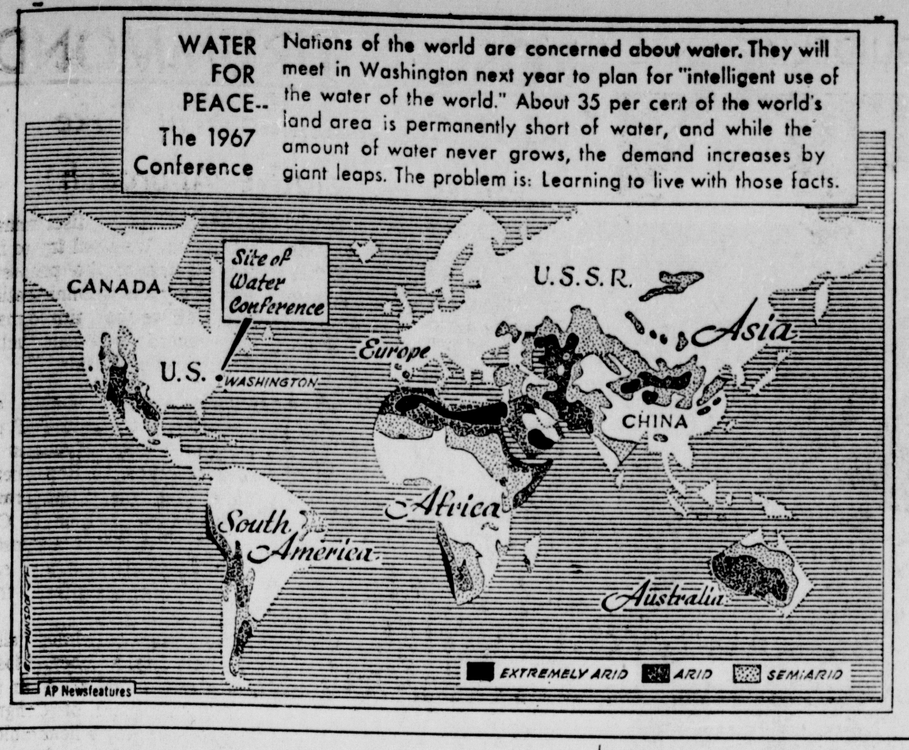
Water Shortages Worry World



By W. JOYNES MacFARLAN

WASHINGTON (AP)—Nations around the world are showing interest in the 1967 International Conference on Water for Peace, called by the United States.

The conference is to be held here May 23-31. It is being planned to deal with all of man's water problems—scarcity, overabundance, purity, quality control, use, desalting, re-use, evaporation control, transportation, weather forecasting, pollution, irrigation, and drainage.

In announcing the conference, President Johnson said the meeting would "focus universal attention on mankind's need for water."

Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall, who will be president of the conference, says the meeting will be "more than an exchange of scientific data, important as that is; it is also a planning meeting to set the stage for international cooperation to eliminate water-based illness, flood, drought, and famine through the intelligent use of the water of the world."

In the background is the knowledge that "water shortage is permanent for about 35 per cent of the land areas of the world."

Nace is a research hydrologist and chairman of the U.S. National Committee for the International Hydrological Decade (1965-74).

"Dry areas are popular places for habitation, agriculture and industry wherever water can be obtained, usually from distant sources," Nace continued.

"Rivers like the Colorado, the Nile, and the Euphrates are able to flow through deserts because they derive most of their water from distant highlands that yield plenty of water."

He pointed out that a glance at a world map showing arid regions "reveals permanent water-short areas existing in slightly more than a third of the earth's land areas—that is, in about 18 million square miles."

"In North Africa," he said, "the Sahara region is almost as large as the entire conterminous United States, and a large additional area is arid to semi-arid. Each of the continents has one desert, and Africa has two."

He observed that "people react to drought in the United States as a disaster" but added there is no general agreement on how to define drought, "because attitudes are subjective, rather than objective."

"A meteorological drought is a shortage of rain," he said. "An agricultural drought is a shortage of soil moisture for plant growth, and a hydrological drought is a shortage of water in rivers and in sub-surface, water-bearing rocks or aquifers."

The Geological Survey figures that the world's oceans, ice fields, lakes and rivers contain more than 324 million cubic miles in the form of fresh ground water. Another 3,100 cubic miles of water, mostly in the form of vapor, is contained in the world's atmosphere.

Most of the earth's original supply of water probably is still in use, the survey adds. It says little has been added or lost in the hundreds of millions of years since the first clouds formed and the first rains fell.

"World population, technology, economic activity and water demands all are growing at geometric rates," Nace says. "But the supply of fresh water is not growing at all."

SACRAMENTO SCENE

Reagan's Takeover: 'Organized Confusion'

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — Assemblyman Robert T. Monagan, R-Tracy, Republican floorleader in the assembly, has described the present change of administration as in a state of "organized confusion, but definite paths of proficiency."

This is a pretty good description of the "provisional government" operating in the IBM building in Sacramento and in Los Angeles. Governor-Elect Ronald Reagan has been in town just twice since the election and indications are he will be spending only a few hours a week in Sacramento between now and inauguration day, Jan. 2.

Reagan did announce the appointment of his two legislative aides this week—Sen. Vernon L. Sturgeon, R-Paso Robles, who was defeated in the June primary, will work with the senate; and Jack B. Lindsey, 41, vice president and a director of a specialty food firm in Los Angeles, will work with the assembly.

Quick reaction to the announcement was that (1) it may prove difficult to have two legislative representatives of the governor unless one is the boss; and (2) it will be difficult for a person such as Lindsey, with no experience, acquaintance or knowledge of the legislators or the "third house" to operate.

As the new order slowly begins to put its administration together, the old, Gov. Edmund G. Brown, is busy at providing for as many of his associates as possible. Some 50 judgeships which stood vacant at the time of his Nov. 8 defeat. Brown has appointed half a dozen judges so far, including his secretary on executive clemency, John S. McInerny, 38. Brown also appointed Assemblyman Burt Henson, D-Ventura, to his long-promised municipal judgeship. Word is that Hugo Fisher, who has resigned as resources agency administrator, as of Jan. 2, also is in line for a superior court judgship in San Diego County.

In his first press conference in Sacramento since the election, Reagan said he was flattered by efforts of a Michigan group to make him a candidate for President, but said he wanted to make it clear he had a four-year contract with the people of California and intended to keep the contract. Reagan repeated his intentions to seek repeal of provisions in the law making school district unification almost mandatory.

The governor meanwhile, said he will leave for a visit to Chile shortly after Jan. 2, not at state expense, to see results of the Chile-California program which he sponsored. Following that, Brown said his plans are not definitely jelled but he probably will accept one of a number of offers he has had to join California law firms.

Strategy meetings were held by assemblymen during the week. Reports of both caucuses were that they were solidly unified, although reports keep cropping up that Assemblyman Robert E. Badham, R-Newport Beach, a conservative, may challenge Monagan for his party-leader post. The Democrats said they all were behind Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh for reelection to that post and the big debate now seems to be over how many and what committees the Republicans are given. The GOP feels its members should head at least 12 of the 27 committees. They previously had only one.

Gasoline-powered cars will have to be outlawed in California by 1980 if the air is to remain acceptably smog free, Frank M. Stead, of the state department of public health, reported.

Behind The News

A Weekly Page Of Background Information

WASHINGTON—Let's say it's 1985. More than 130 million Americans now are crowded into super-cities that extend hundreds of miles. And the highways between them are one long traffic jam.

Today, 90 per cent of the travel on 200 to 500-mile intercity routes is by car. Unless an attractive alternative is found, Americans will keep on using cars in this proportion — and that's where the threat of mammoth traffic jams comes in.

Proposed improvement of rail passenger service offers little hope for a satisfactory solution within the next 10 to 15 years. Rail passenger traffic on short-haul intercity routes is presently declining more than 6 per cent each year. Transportation experts predict short-haul rail passenger service will be abandoned in many areas by 1980, unless far-reaching modernization of today's systems can be achieved in time.

Although airlines now carry less than 5 per cent of the passengers on intercity routes under 500 miles, many transport officials believe that intercity "airbus" travel offers the best promise.

Three rapidly expanding megalopolis areas in the United States are already facing critical transportation problems.

Fast becoming solidly urban are the population corridors between Boston, New York and Washington; between Buffalo and Chicago; and along the Sacramento-San Francisco-Los Angeles-San Diego travel route.

Typical government-sponsored studies of short-haul passenger traffic include: (1) a look at high-speed ground transportation by the Department of Commerce and (2) a recently completed study of a possible aviation solution to traffic problems in the California corridor, now being evaluated by the Federal Aviation Agency (FAA).

The Commerce Department is supporting experiments with high-speed trains, capable of more than 150 miles per hour. Only about $18 million of the department's three-year $90 million study is earmarked for improving conventional trains.

Other studies include trains traveling on an air cushion over a single wide rail and trains propelled by air pressure in a vacuum tunnel or closed pneumatic tube. Few transportation leaders believe that such advanced systems will be developed or in operation by 1980.

In the California corridor, FAA investigated an intercity "airbus" system.

Short-haul intercity air commuters in the late 1970s may swoop down out of the sky and land directly at central city terminals in the best Superman tradition.

Not a bird, not a plane, not even a helicopter, the aircraft that could carry them within blocks of their business appointments is a complex combination vehicle, still being developed. Aircraft designers often refer to it as the airbus.

Now the FAA has completed a $225,000 study of the airbus—a vertical and short takeoff and landing (VSTOL) aircraft. Preliminary findings indicate it could be produced and operated profitably by the late 1970s.

William F. McKee, FAA administrator, is confident that growing passenger traffic on short, 200 to 500-mile intercity routes will lead to early development of VSTOL aircraft.

Not only does the FAA chief see use of such aircraft "in the next 10 years." FAA engineers predict they will be able to operate profitably — in sizes capable of carrying 60, 90 or 120 passengers.

Jack D. Brewer, program manager for VSTOL development for the National Aeronautics and Space Agency (NASA) has joined McKee in predicting commercial VSTOL operations in the 1970s.

What FAA has in mind is an aircraft that will rise vertically —or after a very short takeoff run—fly horizontally at speeds of at least 250 to 350 miles per hour, and descend vertically at its destination. Maximum runway length would not exceed 1,350 feet.

To get the best possible look at what proposed VSTOL airbuses can be like 10 to 15 years from now — and to determine whether they can be profitable—FAA conducted a detailed study of a busy airline operating area.

This was the "California corridor," a 470-mile maze of bus, auto, rail and air routes between San Diego and Sacramento. Twelve California cities, including Los Angeles and San Francisco, were involved.

The study involved the performance of six aircraft between the 12 corridor cities. Four types of VSTOL planes, a conventional 115-passenger jet and a 67-passenger helicopter were included for comparison.

The VSTOL study included proposed 60, 90 and 120-passenger sizes.

Compared with the estimated $3.3 million cost of comparable conventional jet passenger planes, any of the VSTOL planes would be about 25 per cent more expensive — costing from $4.2 million to $4.7 million per plane in the 120-passenger size.

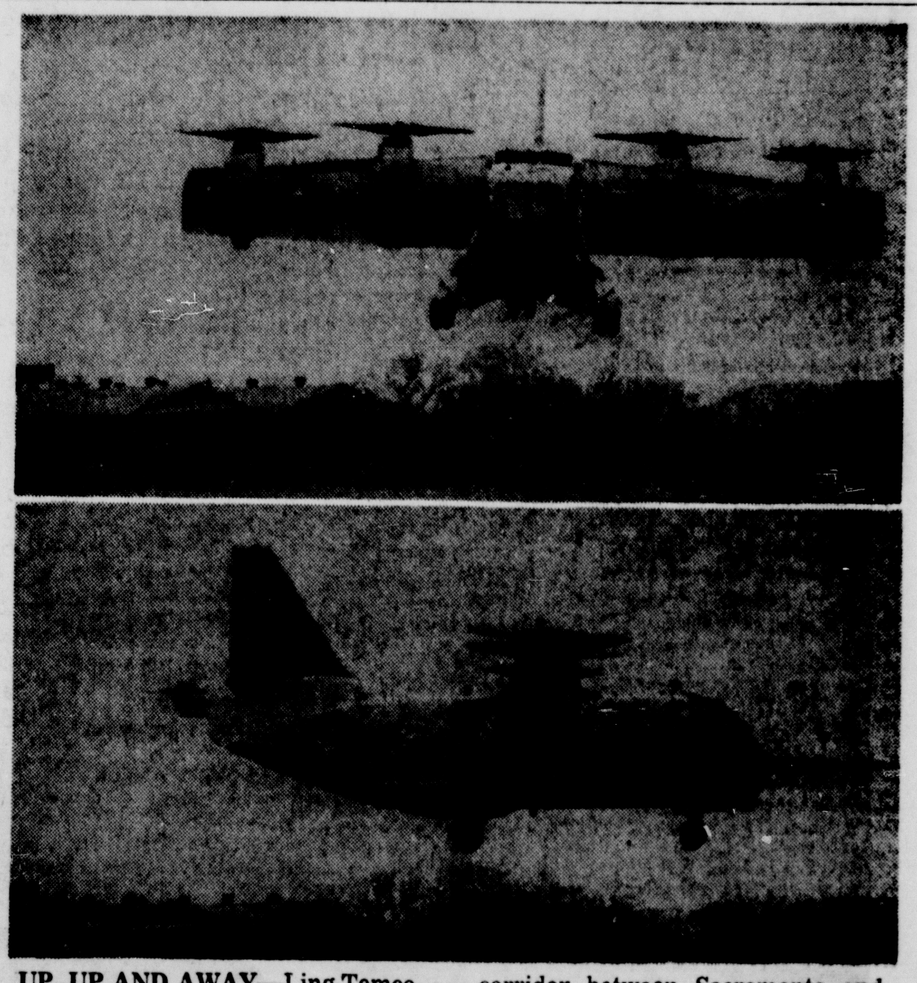
FAA's study showed that a downtown terminal for San Francisco would cost $30 million to $36 million, including 18 acres at about $340,000 per acre.

Equipping the California corridor cities with VSTOL airbus service would cost $1.5 billion to $2 billion. Approximately the same sum would be needed to build an adequate high-speed train system.

The FAA studies contemplated profitable VSTOL operations without government subsidy — costs to be retired over a minimum of 20 years from airline earnings.

To pay for new terminals, aircraft landing fees would be three to four times greater than at existing airports. Extra costs of VSTOL operation would add $1.50 to $2 to a typical $13.50 present air fare between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

On routes only 110 miles or shorter, automobiles would continue to be a serious competitor. Over distances between 200 and 500 miles, the FAA study shows that propeller-driven VSTOL planes can compete with even the faster jets operating from conventional airports.



UP, UP AND AWAY—Ling-Temco-Vought's military version of a vertical takeoff and landing aircraft resembles the "airbus" proposed by federal agencies to solve the huge traffic problems of the California corridor between Sacramento and San Diego. Aviation industry leaders have also suggested that Marin-to-San Francisco airbuses may end the Golden Gate Bridge bottleneck for commuters. (UPI Telephoto)

Hanoi's Air Force Doesn't Shrink

By ANDREW HAMILTON
Advance News Service

WASHINGTON—Hanoi's small air force has not gotten any smaller in recent months despite heavy losses, according to Pentagon estimates. Nor, curiously, has it gotten any bigger.

Intelligence analysts here are intrigued that the count of jet fighters in the North Vietnamese air force has held steady at about 60 to 65 aircraft since early this year.

In the same period, U. S. aircraft have downed 21 of Hanoi's Soviet-designed MIG aircraft, or nearly a third of what U. S. intelligence thinks the North Vietnamese have.

Seven of the American kills have been scored on the supersonic MIG-21. Yet the count of MIG-21s in Hanoi's air force has held steady at 15 to 20 aircraft.

The most advanced interceptor that North Viet Nam has, the MIG-21 is comparable to the McDonnell F-4 Phantom.

North Viet Nam began receiving MIG-21s late in 1965, probably from the Soviet Union. (Defense officials say there is some evidence that China is manufacturing its own MIG-21s now, but nothing conclusive.)

By the spring of this year the total number of MIG-21s in North Viet Nam had reached the current figure. American jets downed their first MIG-21 in April.

The North Vietnamese have also lost 14 of the slower, late Korean-war vintage MIG-17s since April, and a total of 18 of these aircraft since the first was downed in June, 1965.

Yet the count of MIG-17s and the older, slower MIG-15s is currently believed to be 40 to 45 aircraft—the same as it was last spring.

These figures suggest to some analysts that North Viet Nam's allies are supplying her only with replacement aircraft of the same type as the ones downed by American fire.

But the analysts are quick to say they do not know the terms of military aid agreements between the Soviet Union and Hanoi or Communist China and Hanoi, though they say it amounts to "vast quantities" of aid.

Reconnaissance aircraft constantly take pictures of Hanoi's airfields, Haiphong's docks and just about every conceivable facility and activity of importance.

It is from these pictures that the estimates of North Viet Nam's aircraft strength are assembled. But the procedure has certain limitations which make an absolutely accurate count hard to get.

While they can count the aircraft which North Viet Nam has, Pentagon officials are somewhat mystified by the use Hanoi is making of its air force.

The force is too small and inexperienced to play a major role in air defense; besides, the anti-aircraft system which Hanoi has installed with Soviet help is proving quite effective against American attacks.

The United States has lost five aircraft to MIGs over North Viet Nam, but as of Nov. 2 it had lost a total of 414 strike aircraft to ground fire in North Viet Nam since the air war over the North began. Over approximately the same period, American aircraft have shot down 25 MIGs.

Yet the MIGs of Hanoi continue to sally forth.

Mostly they stay out of range of the American aircraft and just observe them. But occasionally, says one pilot, "they take some brave pills" and jump the American jets.

All encounters between MIGs and U. S. aircraft have been initiated by the MIGs, Pentagon officials state. But the ratio of successful engagements to unsuccessful ones is running heavily against the MIGs.

Two MIGs have been shot down by the oldest and slowest tactical fighter flying strike missions in Viet Nam—the propeller-driven Douglas A-1 Skyraider.

On Oct. 9 a Skyraider shot down the best the communists have — a supersonic MIG-21. This is a remarkable achievement, but also a measure of the communist pilot's inexperience.

Lack of experienced pilots may be a major reason why Hanoi has not expanded its air force so far. And a desire to give the pilots more experience may explain why Hanoi lets them risk their necks and machines in unequal battle.

This Week In The World

John Fitzgerald Kennedy, the 35th President of the United States, was shot to death three years ago last Tuesday. His successor, Lyndon Baines Johnson, appointed a commission headed by Earl Warren, chief justice of the United States, to study the events and report to the nation.

It was hoped such a study would preclude the confusions, rumors and theories that survive from the assassination of Lincoln. It was hoped that history would be satisfied. But by the third anniversary of the Kennedy tragedy, certain aspects of the Warren Commission report were cast into doubt.

And one of the prominent doubters was Tex. Gov. John Connally, who took a bullet himself on that black Friday in Dallas.

Simply put, the Warren Commission believes only Lee Harvey Oswald was involved, Oswald fired three bullets from behind; the first bullet went through Kennedy's throat and struck Connally; the second bullet is unaccounted for; the third bullet shattered the President's brain.

"I am convinced beyond any doubt that I was not struck by the first bullet," Connally told a news conference Wednesday.

"I know that I heard the first shot, that I turned to see what happened, and that I was struck by a second shot," the governor said. "The third shot hit the President and not me."

Connally's position was published in Life magazine. The governor studied a motion picture of the assassination and said he believes he was hit nine to 24 frames later than the Warren Commission's assessment. Elapsed time can be computed because the camera records 18.3 frames a second.

The frame in which Connally said he was hit is at most 1.3 seconds from the frame in which the Warren Commission said was the earliest Kennedy was struck. Experiments showed Oswald's rifle could be fired twice in not less than 2.3 seconds. Life concluded there is now a reasonable doubt that Oswald acted alone. It called for the case to be reopened.

Connally said he believes the commission report's principal finding—that Oswald acted alone—but differs on the one detail about which bullet he received.

Around The World; Around The Nation:

Saigon: An American platoon was all but wiped out in the only major setback in Operation Attleboro, which has been highly successful in thwarting an expected offensive near the Cambodian border. A Thanksgiving announcement said that American deaths in Viet Nam rose above 6,000.

Austin, Tex.: President Johnson, recuperating at the ranch from his recent surgery, worked hard on cutting the budget. He announced a 17.5 per cent reduction in highway spending.

New York: A blanket of warm air that covered New York for a week trapped so much filthy air that the air pollution index soared temporarily past 60, while 12 is normal. Persons with respiratory ailments were cautioned to stay inside.

Jerusalem: Israeli troops invaded Jordan in a brief tangled raid which Israel claimed was in retaliation for acts of Arab sabotage in Israel. Later violent demonstrations broke out in Jordan. Palestinian Arabs protesting what they consider King Hussein's failure to act against Israel. Hussein ordered conscription of young men to the army and accepted 20,000 Saudi Arabian troops to guard Jordan's border.

Southern Marin, Bounded By Bay And Ocean

There is Sausalito, dead ahead. This photograph was taken from a plane flying west, over San Francisco Bay to the Pacific Ocean. Separating bay and sea is the southern tip of Marin County. On the bay side, from ridge to waterfront, is the City of Sausalito. The concrete ribbon, running just below the ridge on the bay side and tunneling through at one point, is Highway 101. Running north along the bay is the long Sausalito waterfront. Above Waldo Point, at the northern tip of the waterfront, is Marin City, with apartment houses clustered in the flatland and single family homes dotting the wooded hills. Directly beyond the Waldo Tunnel and stretching all the way to the Pacific are the Fort Barry and Fort Cronkhite military reservations. Part of vast open area to the right of these forts may someday be filled by the Marincello planned community. Near the top right-hand corner of the photo is Stinson Beach, in front of the Bolinas Lagoon. Land jutting out into the ocean is the Bolinas Highlands.

A Terrible Thing Has Happened To Baseball

Take a look at your own left arm. Fingers all working smoothly? Fluid flowing in all the joints? Cut meat with it o.k.? Turn the pages of a book?

It isn't shriveling, is it? You don't need a pill to keep from screaming as you reach for the salt with it?

WHAT IF you didn't have it? I mean, where would you put your wedding ring? How would you drive a car? Sink putts? Play cards?

What would you pay to have it back? Sandy Koufax figures half a million dollars in cheap for an arm. He doesn't want to keep buying sports jackets where the left sleeve is sharter than the right one until the time the left sleeve is empty.

BASEBALL is paying a considerable higher price than Koufax. Multiply 45 games a season by 8,000 to 10,000 added attendance at $3.00 a pop for six or seven years (Warren Spahn had a dozen more) and you begin to get the idea.

But not the whole one. You go back to Babe Ruth before you begin to get the idea what Sandy Koufax meant to the Grand Old Game. You go back to Joan of Arc before you get a model for the kids. Baseball lost more than a southpaw. Baseball last a symbol. Baseball lost a part if its integrity.

TO GIVE you further insight, part of the reason Sandy quit was because he didn't care for the sensation of taking the mound drugged. I don't know whether you know it or not, but even cortisone can have serious withdrawal symptoms when taken orally, and, even though it was safer when taken injectably as Koufax did,it is still a fact that the body resents any outside agency interfering with its internal fights.

IT FEELS it has enough anbiotics to settle its internal disputes and tends to react like a family when a neighbor steps in to keep the peace, or a counrty when a bigger one interferes in its revolution. In Sandy's case, the body registered its disapproval by punishing him with severe stomach upset, some hallucinations, and the general feeling of a guy who has just eaten a pail of poison oysters.

THERE WAS no more thrilling sight in baseball than that first Koufax fastball. I always likened it in my mind to that first hard right Joe Louis threw in a fight. The opponent would get a look of dismay and disbelief on his face as though to say, "Oh, no! They told me this guy could hit. But nobody prepared me for THIS!"

THE FIRST Koufax high hard one produced the same profound effect on a rookie batter, or one who had never seen a Koufax pitch close up—an "I heard it but I don't believe it" look.

It was no secret the high hard one had lost perhaps five miles per hour the last season. That was still 10 miles faster than most everyone else's. But, for the first time in years it was hittable. I don't think the shock of Game 2 in the World Series was that Willie Davis dropped two fly balls off Koufax fast balls in center field. I think it was that Koufax fast balls ended up in centerfield in the first place.

IN A WAY I'm glad Sandy isn't going to "cute" his way through five more seasons or so. In the first place, I want to see him with both arms in place and equi-distant from his shoulder.

But, mostly, I wouldn't want to see Rembrandt doing billboards. I hated to hear Tibbett reduced to yodeling "Accentuate the Positive." I wouldn't want to read Dickens doing soup copy.

WATCH KOUFAX trying to get Willie Mays out with "junk"? Watch Joe Louis try to win a fight by clinching? Never! Go, Sandy. And thanks for the memory. This way, it remains the one I want.

NFL ROUNDUP

Colts, Green Bay In Crucial Tilts

By MIKE GREMAUD
UPI Sports Writer

The Green Bay Packers are getting to be old hands at going down to the wire for a National Football League division crown, but the excitement this year could come from a newcomer at that sort of thing—the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Packers travel to Minnesota tomorrow in hopes of protecting their slim half-game lead over Baltimore in the Western Division race. But the Cardinals host Pittsburgh, and a St. Louis win would shoot them into a first-place tie with Dallas in the Eastern Division battle.

With the exception of Bart Starr, the Packers are in top shape for their clash with the Vikings. It was Fran Tarkenton's brilliant third-down calls and scrambling that downed the Packers in their first meeting earlier this year.

Green Bay is expected to call on reserve quarterback Zeke Bratkowski to replace Starr, and Minnesota will have Tarkenton again. Last week Tarkenton was replaced by sub quarterback Ron VanderKelen in the first half against Los Angeles, but the league's premier scrambler is in top shape for the game against Green Bay (8-2).

The only doubtful Viking starter is receiver Paul Flatley, who has been bothered with a knee injury, and has missed the last two games for Minnesota.

The Packer stable of running backs, including Jim Taylor, Paul Hornung, Elijah Pitts, Donny Anderson and Jim Grabowski give Green Bay all the ground-gaining potential it needs.

In St. Louis, the Cardinals (7-2-1) will be trying to avenge a 30-9 defeat at the hands of Pittsburgh (3-6-1) two weeks ago, and trying to inch back into the Eastern Division lead.

The Cardinals have been plagued by injuries. Quarterback Charley Johnson has been out of action for sometime now, and the Cardinals have lost guard Ken Gray and rookie back Roy Shivers at one time or another during the last three weeks. But coach Charley Winner may get them back into the lineup in time for the Steelers' contest.

In other action in the NFL, Los Angeles (6-5) is at Baltimore (7-3), Atlanta (1-9) meets Chicago (3-5-2) in the Windy City, and New York (1-8-1) is at Washington (5-6).

Los Angeles, virtually out of the Western Division race with a 6-5 record, could aid the Green Bay cause with a win over Baltimore (7-3).

Quarterback Johnny Unitas, who has suffered some shoulder trouble, expects to start for Baltimore. The Rams list backkick return specialist Clancy Williams and halfback Tom Moore as doubtful starters in the game, with Moore having knee trouble.

Marin Quintets Post 3-1 Record

Bruce Kilby, an all-Marin Athletic League end on Terra Linda's co-champion grid team, scored just three points for the Trojan hoopsters last night but his ability to dominate the backboards carried the Marin school to a convincing 74-64 basketball triumph over visiting Healdsburg in its 1966-67 practice debut.

In other games played last night, Marin Catholic downed visiting Lick Wilmerding 64-50 en route to winning its second straight non-league clash, while San Rafael fell to Napa 55-47, at Napa. Redwood evened its record to 1-1 with a 72-64 triumph over Santa Rosa at Santa Rosa.

Although Paul Lee was the top gunner for the Trojans with 18 points, Coach Bob Corley praised Kilby for his ability to help the victors control the boards—one of the more important aspects of the game—in addition to blocking numerous shot attempts from his pivot position.

In front by a slim 29-27 margin at the half and behind by one at the start of the final stanza, the Trojans reeled off 26 big points while holding Healdsburg to 15 and won going away. Fred Smith and Steve Congdon each chipped in with 17 markers for the victors while Wayne Arnsbarger tossed in four buckets for 8 points. Healdsburg's Bob Thompson led all scorers with 23.

MARIN EXPLODES

Marin Catholic, which opened its practice slate the day before Thanksgiving with a 73-52 victory over its Alumni, streaked to a 34-25 halftime lead, then exploded for 20 points in the final period to ice the fray against Lick-Wilmerding. Leading the Wildcats' scoring derby were Ches Bornia, who wound up with 20 points, 16 of those from the floor. He was followed by Paul Vickers with 14. Jim Ingrassia and Harry Matsinger had 9 each and Rick Garms, who came off the bench to score 26 against the alumni team last Wednesday, had 8. All are juniors, and it's no wonder coach Gus Hassapakis sees things looking up this season.

After thumping Sonoma by a 52-35 count last Wednesday in its opener, San Rafael spotted Napa a 31-25 advantage at the half and was thereafter unable to check the Indians as they were outscored by 5 point in the third and 7 in the final period. But on the brighter side of the ledger, Chip Tyson, a standout last season, racked up 16 points on 6 field goals and 4 free throws while veteran backcourt ace Rich Shau rang up 11 markers with 5 from the floor and one from the charity strip.

HORN STARS

For Redwood, it was guard Andre Horn with top honors. Horn, a returnee off last year's Redwood first team, made 8 of 20 shots from the floor and 11 of 14 free throws for 27 points. He also led the team in assists with five.

Jim Marc tallied 16 points to help the Giants' attack and Jack Fitzhenry had 11, in addition to his nine rebounds. As a team, Redwood hit 26 of 57 shots from the field for a fine 46 per cent, and cashed in on 22 of 32 free throws, 69 per cent.

Starting guard Barry Stockwell suffered a sprained ankle and will be out of the Redwood lineup for a spell.

Warriors Open Home Stand, Battle Bulls

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Warriors, leading the Western Division of the National Basketball Assn., open a three-game home stand tonight when they play host to the Chicago Bulls at the Cow Palace, 8:30.

The Bulls snapped a losing streak at nine games last night by beating Los Angeles 121-117. The Bulls moved from fifth and last place into fourth and Los Angeles skidded from fourth to fifth.

The Warriors play the Bulls a return match Tuesday in the Oakland Coliseum. They'll play second-place St. Louis in Civic Auditorium Saturday then pack up for another tour.

The San Franciscans won three of five games on the road trip that ended with a 140-123 loss at Philadelphia. The Warriors' Rick Barry, leading scorer of the NBA, collected 27 points off the 76ers in the first half but was held to nine points in the second. For him that's a slump and he planned to overcome it tonight.

Rough Day For Marin 'B' Cagers

Marin County Class B basketball teams played three games yesterday and came out winless.

Marin Catholic's cagers were defeated by Lick Wilmerding in Kentfield, 25-19. Dave D'Artney with 7 points and Steve McDevitt with 6 paced the Wildkittens.

Napa whipped San Rafael 60-36 on the winners' court. High scorers for San Rafael, now winless in two starts, were Don Penales with 7 points and Phil Martino and Bruce Nave with 6 each.

FIGHTS FULLMER MONDAY NIGHT

Bobo Still Top Ring Draw

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Grandfather Carl (Bobo) Olson climbs into the professional boxing ring for the 115th time Monday night, still enough of an attraction to battle the inaugural main event at Oakland's new Coliseum Arena.

At 38 and still among the top ranking light heavyweights, Bobo fights Don Fullmer of West Jordan, Utah in a bout which could determine which stays near the top of the fistic ladder.

Fullmer, whose brother ruled the middleweight throne after Bobo had been knocked off of it, rates as the No. 2 contender for the 160-pound title in the World Boxing Assn. rankings and No. 4 in the Ring Magazine lists.

Olson, who advised his two-year-old son against a pro career, is the No. 5 man on the WBA lists of the 175-pound division and No. 6 among the Ring ratings.

Bobo figures to weigh 175 for the scrap and Fullmer, who eyes both the middleweight and light heavy titles, expects to hit 167.

"That's a more natural weight for me," he says. "I have to work to get down to 160."

His manager, Angelo Curley, who trained Gene Fullmer when he held the title, says the latter had to work hard to get down to the middleweight limit and indicates Don might be stronger fighting as a light-heavy.

"Don has a different style than Gene," says Angelo. "He's a counter puncher and a better boxer."

Olson could give him a good test. Old Bobo whipped Wayne Thornton, loser in a title bout, twice and did it nearly as handily as did champion Jose Torres.

"I may have to force the fight a little," says the 38-year-old former middleweight king.

In addition to the ranking boxers in the headliner, promoter Don Chargin has lined up two other 10-round offerings. In a middleweight scrap, Jimmy Lester of San Francisco tangles with Andy Heilman in a fight which could determine the toughest Californian in the 160-pound division.

San Rafael Man Catches Whopper

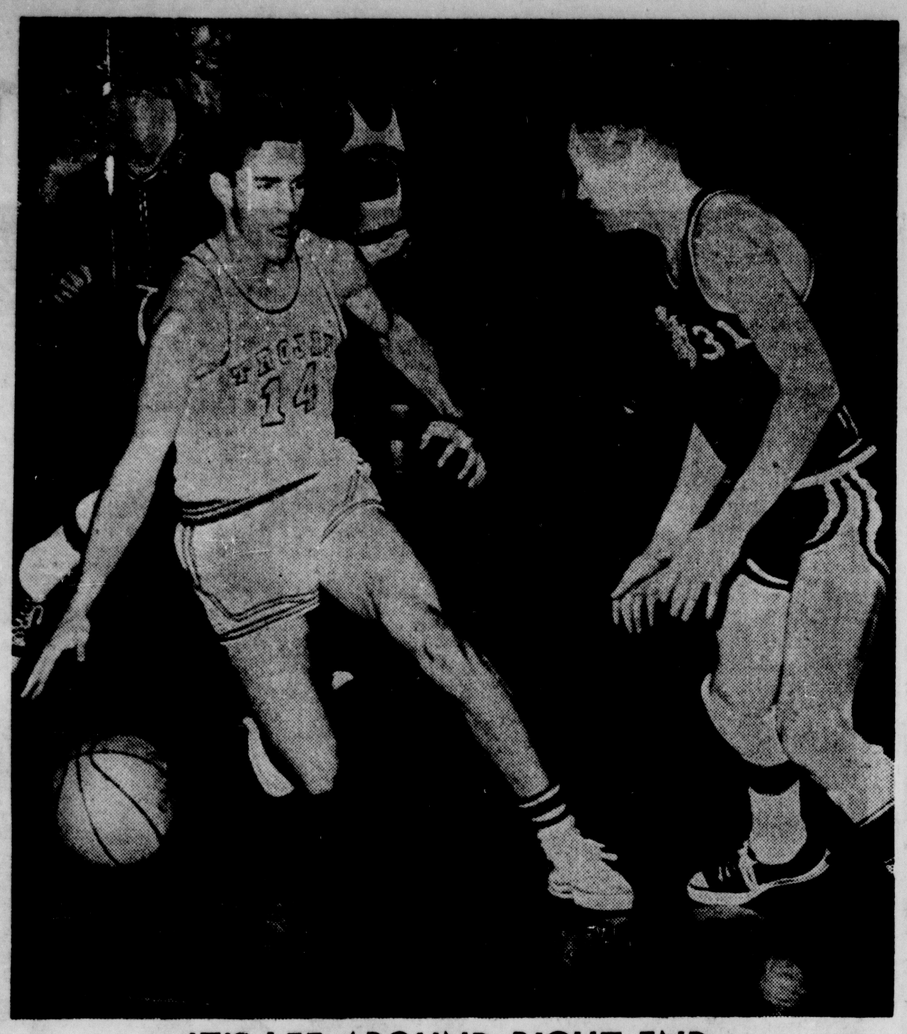
It is a 135-pound sailfish that measured 9 feet, 6 inches. Marmaduke's wife, Virginia, also caught a sailfish but it was released because the law allows only one per boat, unless both are planned to be mounted.

"One in our house will be enough," smiled Marmaduke.



IT'S LEE AROUND RIGHT END

Making the transition from football to basketball in fine style, Terra Linda High School's Paul Lee, All-Marin Athletic League halfback two weeks ago, dribbles around Healdsburg's Tim North during last night's game in the Terra Linda gym. The home court Trojans won their season opener, 74-64. Lee, wearing the same number that was on his football jersey, was high scorer for the Trojans with 18 points. MARIN TAR GRIDDERS REWROTE RECORD BOOK

Coach Dick Read's College of Marin Tars, who rolled up a 5-4 season that could just as easily have been 8-1 gave the school football record books a thorough facelifting, setting or tying 19 records.

Twelve were individual records and seven were credited to team totals.

Quarterback Al Simontacchi and gifted receiver Honor Jackson figured in all but one of the individual records, Simontacchi setting two new marks and tying two more and Jackson setting six new marks and tying one.

Halfback Horace White, a former Tam star, set a record for greatest average of yards per carry with an 8.2 pace, breaking the old clip of 7.4 set by Ray Miller in 1963.

Simontacchi, a former standout as Drake High School's quarterback and a transfer from San Francisco State College, chalked up records for most passing yards in a single season and most pass completions, and tied the season and game touchdown passes records.

His total passing yardage of 1,508 yards eclipsed Curt Embry's 1962 total of 981 yards by 527 yards and his 92 pass completions bettered Embry by 27. He shares the record for touchdown passes in a single game with Ron Blum (1961) and Bob Sparrow (1963) with three scoring strikes.

HONOR JACKSON
A record season

Jackson had a season high of eight passes caught in a single game, passing Craig Bond (1964) and Bill Hall (1965) who had six. His 38 receptions for the season passed Bond's 23 by 15 passes and his eight TD receptions for the season wiped out a joint record by Ron Cole and Jim Lucas (1961) and Bond, who had four.

Jackson, a former Tamalpais standout, also eclipsed Bond's mark of 496 yards in reception yardage by totaling 625 yards.

Jackson also set two scoring records, totaling 56 points for the season to beat Scott Moriarty's 1962 records of 46 and scoring eight touchdowns to top a joint record of six held by Moriarty and Gary Bradley.

Jackson tied the record for most touchdown passes caught in a game with two, the same total as Ron Cole, Jim Lucas and Craig Bond.

The Tars as a team, set records for most passes attempted in a single season (196), most yards per attempt in a season (16.3), most pass completions (92), most points scored in a single game (47), most net yards passing in a game (295), most net yards passing for a season (1,508), total offense for a single game (468).

STAR OKAY AFTER SURGERY

Frank Robinson May Seek $100,000 Pact Next Year

BALTIMORE (AP) — Frank Robinson was on wheels, but not in the sports car he won as the outstanding player in the World Series.

The slugging outfielder of the Baltimore Orioles arrived at a news conference in a wheel chair pushed by Joe Bride, the team's public relations director acting as hospital orderly.

"I came through the operation real good — maybe too good," Robinson said yesterday at Johns Hopkins Hospital. He reported he still felt pain, but that he already had put his full weight on the leg.

"I was told to sit on the side of the bed and exercise my knee," he said. "But I've been up and around on it when the door was closed and no one was around." He said he was out of bed for the first time Wednesday, the day after the operation.

Robinson is expected to leave for his Los Angeles home early next week, and then be on crutches another one to three weeks. He will be given a prescribed list of exercises to do at home in preparation for spring training in Florida.

The American League's Most Valuable Player said he was skeptical about undergoing his first operation and "tried to figure out some way not to go through with it."

But after being told that the knee might even become worse if he played on it next season, Robinson decided on the operation and now he is more encouraged.

"You can give my wife credit," he said. "She convinced me."

BANQUET TOUR

Robinson said he didn't expect the operation to affect his winter-time banquet appearances, where he is much in demand this year, or his bargaining power for a 1967 contract.

"The way my banquet schedule was set up, I didn't have any appearances in December anyway," he said. "Things pick up again in mid-January."

Robinson, who received an estimated $68,000 from the Orioles during his first American League season, said he doesn't have a figure in mind yet for 1967, but there have been reports he would seek $100,000.

CAJUN LEADER

Yancey Calls Golf A Selfish Business

By BEN THOMAS

LAFAYETTE, LA. (AP) — "Golf is a selfish business," says Bert Yancey, a young Floridian who has won three tournaments this year and is seeking a fourth in the Cajun Classic-final stop for 1966 on the PGA circuit.

Yancey carries a one-stroke lead into today's third round of the $34,500 Cajun Classic after shooting a five-under par 67 yesterday to go with his first round 65. His 36-hole score was 132.

"In golf, you play for yourself, and I don't feel that I'm really contributing anything to the world," said Yancey in an interview after his round yesterday. "It's kind of depressing at times."

Hot on Yancey's heels after the second round was Johnny Pott, who hasn't won a tour victory in two years but has picked up paychecks totaling $95,000. Pott had a 66 yesterday for a 133 total.

Just behind Pott, at 134, were Bob Goalby, John Schlee, Jacky Cupit, and Wright Garrett.

Yancey, 28, who was a cadet at West Point for two years, has been one of the bright stars on the play-for-pay circuit this year. His first tour victory was at Wilmington, N.C., in the Azalea Open.

Since then he's captured the titles at the Portland and Memphis opens. His 72-hole score at Memphis — 265 — was the lowest this year on the tour, and he needed only 102 putts for 72 holes at Portland, the fewest of the year.

"I've always dreamed of being a doctor," said Yancey, "and maybe I can make enough money playing golf to go back to college. "If I can't be a doctor, maybe I could be a teacher and contribute something," he continued.

"Even as a golf teacher you're contributing something."

If Yancey wins the Cajun Classic, his four victories will match those of Billy Casper, who has had the most this tour year.

Yancey had to leave West Point after suffering a nervous breakdown, and received a medical discharge in 1961. His erect bearing still reflects the cadet training. He later attended Florida State briefly.

"I'm committed to the tour for six years and I've already played three," said Yancey. "I guess my ambition is to win the Masters."

Troppmann May Go To Hawaii For Year

Bob Troppmann, athletic director and head football coach at Redwood High School, will probably be teaching in Hawaii next school year on a one-year exchange program.

The Tamalpais Union High School District this week approved a year's leave of absence for Troppmann. He has until May 1 to notify the Redwood High School administration that he is taking the leave, depending on whether he finds an opening through the Hawaii Department of Education.

Troppmann had been considering his request since his family vacationed in Hawaii last summer. He applied for the leave of absence in the latter part of October, during the past football season.

BOB TROPPMANN
Hawaii bound?

In the exchange program, Troppmann would live for a year in Hawaii and teach in one of the state's high schools, trading with someone there who would teach for a year at Redwood. The teachers don't have to teach the same subject.

"But I would like to coach and work in physical education," Troppmann said.

His son, Jim, attends Stanford University.

Bert Bell Jr. Blasts Pro Grid, Quits

Bell, whose father served as commissioner of the NFL from 1946 until his death in 1959 and played a major role in building the NFL to its present position, quit his job as business manager of the Baltimore Colts in a surprising move yesterday.

"The new medium in the NFL is the almighty dollar," Bell said as he blasted the league for being dominated by "crass comercialism" and "Madison Avenue gimmickry."

Bell said his father's "protective ideology is not in the mainstream of pro football philosophy.

"I cannot lend the name Bell to the series of policies that has become the vogue in the last few years," he said.

He criticized electronic gadgetry used in televising football games and he also attacked the NFL practice of televising games into areas where games are also being played in a drastic departure from the policy his father started and fought in court to preserve. He said the league is endangering itself by "overexposure" through television and expansion.

Bell has been critical of the merger between the AFL and NFL, maintaining that a league of 26 teams "cannot last."

San Rafael Opens Second Half Of Winter League

Litchfield's semi-pro baseball team from San Rafael will be starting the second half of the San Francisco AAA Winter League tomorrow and hopes to have as much success as the first half.

The Marin County team won all five of its first half games for a 5-0 record and starts the second round tomorrow at 2 p. m. against Montrose Chemical, at Funston's Garrigan diamond in Golden Gate Park. Litchfield's won 5-4 over Montrose in their first half meeting.

Two of the first half games were rained out and will be made up at the end of the season.

North Cal Ski Areas Opened

TAHOE CITY (AP) — Major ski areas in this Northern California wintersport complex opened this Thanksgiving Day holiday after storms that mantled the Sierra Nevada in white.

Snow depths at Lake Tahoe area resorts ranged from two feet at the lodges to four feet on mountain tops. At Mount Shasta to the north, snow depth were reported at up to nine feet.

Delicious Black Brant Can Be Had Off West Marin Shoreline

STEVENS

My phone rang a few moments ago. One of my readers in Marin County asked if the season on brant had been set, and if so, where would be a good place to hunt them. The answer:

The season on black brant opened today and will run through Feb. 13. A valid 1966 hunting license and a federal duck stamp are necessary to take brant.

The black brant is, I believe, the smallest goose that visits our shores. He is found only on the Pacific Coast and apparently spends his resting time in the ocean off shore some distance. These little geese apparently feed mainly on eel grass fairly close to shore, when the tide is at the ebb.

Whereas the black brant is an aquatic goose, I am told they are delicious eating and have no "fishy" taste. Yes, the black brant will decoy quite readily, and is nowhere as cagy as his big brother, the Canada goose.

As stated, the main food of the brant is eel grass, and I know of only one place along the local coast where eelgrass may be found. That is not far from Dillon's Beach, close to Marshall.

Some hunters shoot from an area between Dillons Beach and Marshall. They plant their decoys and hide behind a log or patch of brush. However, best results seem to have been from a skiff near or in the eel grass area.

I have never hunted this little goose, but have been told that the brant comes within range on the ebb tide and flies close to the surface of the water, with a change of altitude several times by the leader of the flock which follows the movement.

If you are interested in a black brant hunt, I suggest you contact Dillons Beach or Nick's Cove, Marshall. Either place will give you the low-down on when, where and how to hunt black brant.

Road Racers Vie At Riverside This Weekend

RIVERSIDE (AP) — Amateur road racing drivers compete today and tomorrow in 12 races and 22 classes in the American Road Race of Champions at Riverside International Raceway.

Bud Morley, of Denver, averaged 103.539 miles an hour in a McLaren - Ford, and Ralph Salyer, of Hammond, Ind., tied that speed in a McKee Ford to lead qualifiers on the 2.6-mile course with nine turns.

Among drivers of modified under-2-liter cars, Don Wester, of Carmel, averaged 100.106 m.p.h. in a Porsche Carrera 6.

BASKETBALL PROSPECTS

UCLA Is West's Super-Power Team

By SCOTT BAILLIE

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Washington's Huskies upset UCLA in football this season but who can pull the plug on the Bruins' mighty basketball squad?

The crowd faces east at the name of Lew Alcindor, because that's where the 7-1 1-2 inch titan hails from—New York. He checks in as a soph after leading the UCLA freshman to an undefeated season which included an easy win over the varsity.

Regional talk isn't so much about UCLA wrapping up the Pacific Eight title but of winning its third NCAA crown in four years. Injuries might stop the Uclans if upsets don't. For the Bruins have lost letterman Edgar Lacey for the season due to an injured knee.

Alcindor averaged 33.1 points per game at center with the frosh and 21.5 rebounds. The Bruins also have the fleet Lucius Allen, another soph to team up with the veteran Mike Warren at guard. Word is that Allen has all the moves of a Walt Hazzard.

BRUIN SHARPSHOOTERS

Then there's Lynn Shackelford, who is deadly from the corners with 20.9 points per game average and Mike Lynn who averaged 16.6 per contest last season.

Nobody else on the coast seems to have a chance but the season goes on anyway.

For instance, Seattle University (16-10) looms large as the usual power among independents. The Chieftains' Tom Workman (6-7) already is being billed for All America honors.

The University of the Pacific is rated a strong threat to retain the West Coast Athletic Conference title it won last March Coach Dick Edwards lost only two men from the champion quintet.

Oregon State won the Pacific Eight Conference crown last season but has lost three starters. Coach Paul Valenti will depend greatly on center Ed Fredenburg and Loy Peterson to lead a rebuilding campaign.

Gordy Harris (6-10) is among the four top scorers returning to the Washington Huskies from last season's squad. He will be helped out by Dave Hovde, Doug Westlake and Dave Carr.

TALL SQUAD

The conference darkhorse is Washington State, where Coach Marv Harshman could have one of his best seasons in the last nine. seven members of the squad stand 6-7 and there's center Jim McKean at 6-10 who heads the returnees.

Rene Herrerias has five of his top scorers back at California headed by Russ Critchfield who gunned in 387 points last season. He and Charlie Perkins figure to give the Bears backcourt balance.

Jim Barnett, one of Oregon's great stars, now is with the Boston Celtics but Coach Steve Balko can count on four remaining starters. They include Nick Jones, John Pinkstaff (6-7), Bill Thomas and Bob Craven (6-7).

Southern California (13-14 last season) has six junior college men on hand headed by Bill Hewitt (6-6).

In the West Coast A.C., Santa Clara has a good chance of giving the University of the Pacific a tough argument. Coach Dick Garibaldi lists six lettermen returning to his Bronco squad.

Squirrel Hunting Is Quite A Sport; You Need Keen Eye

By JERRY HARRELL

SACRAMENTO (AP) — "A man shouldn't be out squirrel huntin' if he can't shoot the eye out of the critters at 50 yards," a confirmed squirrel hunter once said.

The sport of squirrel hunting can truly be a test of marksmanship — and patience — for even the most skilled hunter.

California, with an abundance of other upland game species, never has been much of a squirrel hunting state despite good populations in many areas.

But the sport has been on the upswing since World War II as more and more people have migrated here from eastern and southern states where the sport is popular.

State Fish and Game officials say California's tree squirrel populations could stand five times the hunting pressure they get now.

A study by the Fish and Game Department found that only about 22,000 hunters, or one of about every 18 who buy hunting licenses, report doing any squirrel hunting. They bag 70,000 to 80,000 of the bushy-tailed animals each year.

"California hunters have traditionally sought species that provide a larger return for effort expended such as quail, doves and pheasants," the department reported in its master plan for fish and wildlife.

"Although widespread, squirrels are scattered over their range in heavy cover and are difficult to hunt . . . it is estimated that the 1963 take of 75,900 could be increased four or five times if hunters were willing to put forth the effort."

One big problem in trying to manage squirrels is a lack of knowledge about the animal's life and habits. The department proposes major research on squirrels to fill this gap and provide a framework for managing future hunting. It's estimated there will be some 60,000 squirrel hunters by 1980.

This year's regulations allow squirrel hunting in 34 of California's 58 counties, all of them north of the Tehachapi Mountains. The limit is two squirrels per day, two in possession. The season started Oct. 1 and continues through Jan. 2.

One of the squirrel's main attractions is that he provides a chance for a mixed bag for the hunter who already has limited on quail or other upland game.

Squirrels are hunted both with shotguns and .22 caliber rifles, but confirmed squirrel hunters will tell you that only the rifles are sporting.

The character who said a good hunter should be able to hit a squirrel's eye at 50 yards was a West Virginia mountaineer who once worked on a forestry crew with the writer. He only used a single-shot .22 rifle.

"The repeaters make you careless and you waste ammunition," he liked to say.

As for marksmanship, the writer had his doubts until he sat with the hunter one day watching for squirrels.

When a big gray squirrel appeared in a pine tree limb about 35 yards away, the hunter spat some tobacco juice, aimed carefully . . . and shot the squirrel in the head, missing the eye by about a half inch.

Opening lead — ♠ J

Harrison-Gray decided to bid a slam as soon as his partner raised to three clubs.

Since only a diamond lead looked dangerous, he bid thre diamonds to discourage West from leading the suit. As it turned out, his bid had other effects.

SLAM UNSOUND

West led the seven of hearts, and dummy's jack won. The favorable opening lead was not enough, but all might be well if West had the ace of diamonds. (The slam was not really the soundest contract ever seen.)

Gray got to his hand with a trump and let his singleton diamond, but had no luck on this trick.

ONLY ONE DISCARD

Gray saw that he could get only one discard on the queen of diamonds. Since one discard was not enough, he dicided to play for a swindle.

The British master took the ace of hearts, ruffed a heart in dummy and then ran all of the trumps, leaving dummy's diamonds in full sight to act as a threat.

THE THREAT

The threat had its effect. West, who had to make four discards on the trumps, thought he could part with only one diamond. He threw one heart and two spades—and there went the slam.

Gray next led out the top spades, dropping the queen and jack. "These seem to be good," the Englishman murmured, showing the ten and four of spades to take the last two tricks.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one diamond. Make it easy for partner to bid either hearts or spades at his second turn. The trouble with bidding one heart in response to one club is that partner may raise hearts with 3-card heart support rather than show a 4-card spade suit.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, Nov. 26, the 330th day of 1966 with 35 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning stars are Mars and Jupiter. The evening star is Saturn.

John Harvard, the chief founder of Harvard University, was bron this day in 1607.

On this day in history:

In 1789, President George Washington set this day aside as one of national thanksgiving for adoption of the United States Constitution.

In 1925, Americans could buy a new Ford roadster for $260.

In 1930, one-quarter of all the office space available in New York City's skyscrapers were for rent after the depression.

In 1940, the Nazis forced 500,000 Jews of Warsaw to live in a ghetto surrounded by an eight-foot concrete wall.

A thought for the day—American writer Mark Twain said: "Habit is habit, and not to be flung out of the window by any man, but coaxed downstairs one step at a time."

TIME AND TIDE

FOR ADOPTED FAMILY

Retired Couple Turns Ranch Home Into Childrens Paradise

By MARJORIE GRAHAM

EL PASO, Tex. (AP) —A 16-bedroom ranch house is hardly the home for an average family, but then the Edward J. Bartholics are hardly the average family.

Two and one-half years ago the Bartholics, then living near Redmond, Ore., heard through a missionary friend of the plight of a Mexican woman in Juarez, across the border from El Paso.

The poverty-stricken woman had a 16-month-old baby who was sickly and weighed just 9 pounds. The baby's legs were deformed by rickets and he was never expected to walk, if he lived.

The Bartholics—Ed, 67, and Oletha, 57—adopted the child. They have since moved to the El Paso area and adopted nine other Mexican children. The family lives at the Angel Wing Ranch in Socorro, about 200 miles from El Paso.

The Bartholics—he is a former insurance and lumber man—had eight children of their own, but the only child still living at home is Carlieta, 16. Their adopted children are from three separate families.

Timmy, the youngster they first adopted, is now a normal healthy 4-year-old. The Bartholics, nondemoninational missionaries, have adopted his two brothers and two sisters as well—Joseph, 3; Crystal, 9; April 12, and Jim, 14.

Diane, 11, and Lisa, 7, are natural sisters, while the third family unit includes Janice, 12; David, 7; and Lorie, 4. Their eldest sister, Angie, was not adopted by the Bartholics, but arrangements have been made for her to live in their home and attend Socorro High School.

The five-acre ranch which the family calls home lends itself well to the large family needs. There is room for 13 Shetland ponies. Bartholic hitches them to a red stage coach for children's rides at county fairs, rodeos and shopping centers. Family pets include two cats, two dogs and three goats.

Although the Bartholics are Protestant, they leave the faith of each youngster to the child's own choosing. The children from Roman Catholic homes attend their own church.

Language differences have caused no particular problem for the family. The Bartholics said the children are in different bilingual stages of development and those who still speak Spanish serve as interpreters for their parents.

Through their own newsletter, which has on its mailing list religious and social workers throughout the country, they appeal for contributions of money and clothing to help other needy children both in Mexico and the United States.

The Bartholies say they have no intention of becoming an adoption agency, but have offered to help bring together people interested in taking a Mexican child with mothers willing to give up children to better their circumstances.

"We have taken Mexican children because, at our ages, we could not adopt any here," Mrs. Bartholic said.

"We are amply repaid in the satisfaction that comes from seeing these children begin to live again. We have not taken them away from their mothers. On the contrary, when they are grown, they may return to Mexico if they wish."

Three Schools Of Theology In Union Move

Three schools of theology in Berkeley are putting their talk of cooperation into action by merging faculties, students and courses for their first-year programs.

Berkeley Baptist Divinity School, Pacific Lutheran Theological Seminary and the Church Divinity School of the Pacific (Episcopal) have joined in the Associated Theological Schools, perhaps one of the most significant projects in theological education ever made on the West Coast.

"A spirit of understanding, faith and cooperation has brought these three religious traditions together to provide an educational program of the highest order," said Very Rev. Sherman E. Johnson, dean of the Episcopal seminary.

He explained that courses in Old Testament, New Testament and theology are being taught by the combined faculties to first-year students of all three schools. "These students are receiving the benefit of great scholarship and teaching from each seminary," the dean said.

Dean Johnson was one of the chief developers of the interdenominational Graduate Theological Union in Berkeley, a unique ecumenical effort in itself, and he also was a leader in establishing the new Associated Theological Schools.

The new merger, along with the GTU and the recently established Berkeley Priory of the Roman Catholic Dominican Order, is another step in making Berkeley one of the most important centers in the world, the dean said. "These three efforts certainly make Berkeley unique in the ecumenical movement," he said.

Besides coming together for classes, students and faculty from the three schools frequently worship at noontime services, they lunch together.

He added that the three schools plan to move the associate plan through all three years of their courses of study. The present first-year class, for example, will continue to be involved in the ecumenical program throughout its three years. Students now in their second or third years at the seminaries are continuing in previously used curricula.

Joint Attack Set On Urban Problems

NEW YORK (UPI) —Three major Protestant denominations, which annually invest close to $8 million in urban have agreed to pool money, manpower and communication resources in a joint attack on urban problems.

They are the United Church and the United Presbyterian Church U.S.A. The three denominations also are involved, along with the Methodist Church, in an interdenominational coalition to spur the development of low-cost housing on regional and local levels.

No Church Storage

STONEVILLE, N.C. (AP)—This town, begun in 1857 by Frank Stone, a Baptist minister, has lived up to the heritage of its founder. With a population of only 951, it has 10 churches to serve the community.

Religion Back On School Level

NORTH CHILI, N. Y. (UPI)—Religion and theology are being re-established as important parts of the college curriculum, Dr. Lewis B. Mayhew, professor of education at Sanford University, told a workshop of the Council for the Advancement of Small Colleges, at Roberts Wesleyan College.

"This takes the form of secular institutions creating departments of religion and theology which, when properly staffed, attract heavy student enrollment," Dr. Mayhew said. "In the religiously related schools it is taking the form of making the required work in theology more contemporary in its idiom and relevance."

Latin American Aid

NEW YORK (UPI) — Three community self-help development projects in Latin America will be supported by a grant of $30,000 made by the Charles E. Merrill Trust, reports the Catholic Relief Services—NCWC. The funds will be used to purchase supplies and equipment for the projects, of which one is in Chile and the other two in Honduras.

Survey Shows Civil Rights Pace Too Fast

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) —A survey of 8,554 persons who attend 151 local congregations of the United Church of Christ shows resistance to the pace of the civil rights movement comes from affluent, educated white church members as well as from lower income groups, according to Rev. Dr. Yoshio Fukuyama, director of research of the church's Board for Homeland Ministries.

About half the survey covered small town and rural churches in the Great Plains area, the rest churches in metropolitan centers. Dr. Fukuyama said approximately half the United Church members in both areas agreed that the Negro is right in demanding his full civil rights now, but 45 per cent in the Great Plains and 62 per cent in the metropolitan churches believe Negroes are trying to move too fast to obtain justice and equality. Of non-white members of the denomination, only one per cent believe the Negro is moving too fast.

Unity Plan Refined

OXFORD, England (AP) — The Anglican-Methodist Unity Commission is redrafting some details of its plans for uniting the Church of England and British Methodism in the light of suggestions and criticisms offered by members of the two churches.

Presbyterian Pastor Checks Getting Bigger

NEW YORK (UPI)—The average salary of ministers in the United Presbyterian Church has climbed from $6,547 to $7,975—a rise of 22 per cent—since 1960.

The figures were made public by the United Presbyterian Pension Plan, which numbers among its members 98 per cent of the Presbyterian ministers serving churches.

Not included in the salary figures is a 15 per cent housing allowance provided to ministers who do not occupy church-owned manses.

While no current statistics are available, a 1964 survey by the National Council of Churches showed that Presbyterian salaries were about $2,000 a year higher than the average for all Protestant clergy.

Minister Urges Greater Union In Civil Rights

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Church members should not use Negro militancy and differences among Negro leaders as an excuse for withdrawing from the civil rights effort, Rev. Dr. Ben Mohr Herbster, President of the United Church of Christ, told an open meeting here.

"Perhaps there has never been a time when our help was so needed," Dr. Herbster said. "This is one of the areas where the Church can continue to make its influence felt for justice, for righteousness, for compassion and for reconciliation. Unless we are able to stand here we will not be worthy of standing any place else."

With Movie And TV Both Going For Her, Barbara Is Happy Girl

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Happiness for an actress is working in a televison series and starring in a movie simultaneously.

It is also exhausting, but Barbara Feldon loves every minute.

She is Agent 99 in the wacky "Get Smart" video show and at the moment she is co-starring with Dick Van Dyke in "A Garden of Cucumbers."

HER SCHEDULE requires Barbara to work two days a week in the series at Paramount's Sunset Studios and three days a week in the movie at Goldwyn Studios. Barbara's schedule leads to confusion. She has dressing rooms at both studios, complete with refrigerators and wardrobe, along with an apartment that contains both conveniences.

"It's like living in three homes," she sighed. "I'm never quite sure where I leave anything."

But Barbara's not complaining. She simply thinks about all those unemployed years after leaving Carnegie Tech in Pittsburgh, and her double work schedule is a dream come true.

"YOU JUST HAVE to learn to conserve your energy," she explained during a lunch of apple butter mixed with cottage cheese and sardines on the side.

BARBARA FELDON
A busy actress

"The nicest thing is having two families. When I report back to 'Get Smart' my dressing room is filled with flowers and gifts from the crew. Then when I return to the movie everyone welcomes me back like a long lost sister."

This is Barbara's first motion picture after a couple of years as a beautiful huckster on television commercials, plus the TV series. She finds it simpler to spend an entire day in movies working on only three pages of the script.

"The pace on televison is easier, though," she said. "The momentum keeps you going and helps your performance. There's a vitality to it that keeps you on your toes all the time.

AS FAR AS is known, Barbara is the first actress to star in both mediums at the same time. It is curious, too, because she is not a glamor girl nor one of the great actresses of our time.

But she is a charmer with long, dark hair, bangs, wide-set eyes and a pretty mouth that appears always to be on the brink of laughter.

"My sex quality is pure myopia," she laughed. "I can't see a thing without my glasses, so my eyes are always half-shut. Some people think it's sexy. But it does help my work. I never know where the camera is or what the other people on the set are doing. It leaves my mind free to concentrate on my lines."

New Clothes For Men Go Western

That sage advice, "Go West, young man," has brand new meaning translated by the latest trends in men's wear this Christmas-time.

CLOTHES WITH a genuine western flavor capture the trailblazer spirit of today's collegiate young men, as well as the independently casual moods of the "Mod."

Fabrics in fall's most flexible wardrobes for sportsmen and spectators alike are corduroy and scrubdenim. Both have durable press editions in Eastman Kodel polyester and cotton that maintain an even, well-groomed gait through the marathon pace of daily living.

THE DOWNRIGHT necessity of durable press in this day and age stands ever ready to perform in shirts that can race across rocky terrain without a trace of fatigue, and trousers that keep a sharply-edged crease.

The Poinsettia Is Traditional

They impart the special warmth of Christmas, no matter where or how they are used. These perennial favorites have a grace and charm that is unique among living plants.

On a low bench or coffeetable, the poinsettia's height is an ideal accent. Arranged in tiers on the floor, or on a bookcase or fireplace mantle, they provide a formal splendor all their own.

The Gordon Setters Are Their Breed

The Keith Bechlers Are Convinced There's No Other Dog Like Them

By DON KEOWN

The Gordon Setter is "the" gun dog of Scotland.

But, as far as the Keith Bechlers of Woodacre are concerned, he's also the perfect all-around dog for Marin County.

But, Mrs. Bechler, who before that had owned and loved collies, shepherds, a Labrador and a Great Dane, says: "The Gordon has them all beat. The others just don't compare."

THE BECHLERS' personal relationship with this centuries-old breed from the hills of Scotland began in 1963 with their acquisition of Bonnie from Dr. Charles King of Ross who raises the Gordons as hunting dogs.

SO THEY watched the advertisements and attended the dog shows, but with nary a sign of a Gordon Setter.

Then, finally, they spotted the advertisement for which they had been looking—in the classified columns of the Independent-Journal, naturally.

ONCE THERE, however, Mrs. Bechler found herself facing an impossible decision. "All the puppies looked so cute, I just couldn't decide which one to choose."

Her husband put an end to her dilemma. "He just called, and when one responded, he said: "That one is Ours?"

"That one" was Bonnie, named by the Bechlers that very day as they drove home with their new acquisition. "We chose Bonnie," Mrs. Bechler says, "because it was the first Scot name we could think of."

Later Bonnie was to acquire the fancier kennel name of St. Andrew Bonnie Par.

"ST. ANDREW," Mrs. Bechler explains, "because that is the famous world's oldest golf course in Scotland, and my husband is a Scot and a golf nut. Par, because it is a golf term."

Bonnie was acquired initially as a pet only, Mrs. Bechler says. "We especially wanted a dog for the children."

There was no intention then to enter the show ring or field trial competitions. And Bechler had given up hunting when his guns were stolen from his parked car in San Francisco.

THEN, A WEEK after Bonnie had given birth to her first litter of 11 puppies, the Bechlers had reason to contact some Palo Alto residents who were in the process of forming a Pacific Coast regional branch of the Gordon Setter Club of America.

"They invited us to a meeting," Mrs. Bechler says, "and that led ultimately to our showing of Bonnie."

Bechler was reluctant to show the dog at first, but was finally persuaded.

Bonnie proceeded to win her championship in the show ring with a remarkable run of successes. Competing always in the open class, she has never failed to take winner's bitch or first female in her shows.

THE BECHLERS credit Mrs. Tressie Taaffe of Kentfield for a large assist in their success. She and her late husband had raised Gordon Setters earlier under the name of Marinero Kennels. Now she proceeded to give the Bechlers the benefit of her experience with advice and help.

"We think he's the very best," says Mrs. Bechler.

Bonnie's indoctrination into field trials and hunting also came about largely by happenstance.

"THE SETTER people—Irish, English and Gordon—were holding a fun trial (in which points do not count toward a championship), We attended, just to watch, and we took Bonnie along. Some of the others there started urging is to 'run her and see what she does.' So we did."

The dogs go out in pairs, and Bonnie was teamed with an Irish Setter. The inexperienced Gordon came through with a splendid performance, finding all three of her birds. The Irish Setter found none.

AND SO HE resumed hunting. Mrs. Bechler hunts, too.

Bonnie, they say, has proven to be a superb hunting dog. "She found more than 65 birds by herself last year," Mrs. Bechler says, hastening to add, "of course, we didn't shoot them all."

Kip, one of her sons by her

THE START of the Keith Bechlers' St. Andrew kennel of Gordon Setters came three and a half years ago with their acquisition of Bonnie from Dr. Charles King of Ross. Purchased as a pet, Bonnie has won her championship in the show ring, and demonstrated her abilities in field trials and in hunting. She has also produced two large litters of puppies for the Bechlers.

first litter, has followed in his mother's pawprints by also demonstrating a remarkable ability as a field and hunting dog. And in the show ring, he is halfway to his championship.

Bonnie now has a second litter—this time 14 puppies. "And Kip," Mrs. Bechler says, "takes better care of them than their mother. He watches over them constantly."

IT WAS KIP, too, who adopted a kitten, protecting it, eating with it, playing with it, sleeping with it.

He did the same with a fawn that made its home temporarily with the Bechlers.

Several of the dogs to which the Bechlers retain ownership have, however, been "farmed out" to other people, who may or may not become their legal owners later.

DESPITE THEIR size, the Gordons make excellent house dogs, the Bechlers say. "Ours sleep in the house and have the run of the place."

"We sold one of our dogs to people living in a New York penthouse, and it has worked out quite well," says Mrs. Bechler. "And some people living in a small San Francisco home have two Gordons, both full-size."

GORDON SETTERS require very little in the way of grooming, Mrs. Bechler says. "Just about all that is required is the usual brushing, plus some trimming of the fur from the ears and from the feet."

ONE OF THE NEW litter of Gordon Setter puppies at the Keith Bechler home in Woodacre is admired by Sandy, 5, Terri, 7, and Mrs. Bechler. The pup has 13 equally appealing brothers and sisters. Overhead can be seen some of the many ribbons the Bechlers' dogs have won in the show ring and in field trials.

YEAR-AND-A-HALF-old Kip is not only a winner in the show ring and a standout performer in the field, but also the special favorite of the Bechler children—and the self-appointed "babysitter" in the household. Here he keeps an eye on one of his little brothers.

ly in this area, Mrs. Bechler says.

"However, whereas there used to be none in Northern California shows, now as many as 10 or 15 will be entered."

They are far more numerous in the East, she says, and she predicts that they will continue to grow in number on the West Coast.

HISTORY TAKES notice of these black and tan setters as far back as the 16th Century in both Scotland and England.

However, it was Gordon Castle and its dukes who gave the breed its name. The castle was the home for a famous strain of the hunting dogs, particularly during the tenure of Alexander, the fourth duke of Gordon who died in 1827 at the age of 84.

The first American importations were made by George Blunt and Daniel Webster in 1842. Their Rake and Rachel came directly from the Duke of Gordon kennels. This pair founded the breed in the United States, but from time to time, Gordons are still imported from Europe to mix their bloodlines with the American Gordons.

THE BREED IS described thusly:

"A good-sized, sturdily-built of bone and substance, but active, upstanding and stylish, appearing capable of doing a full day's work in the field. Strong, rather short back, well-sprung ribs and short tail; a fairly heavy head, finely chiseled; intelligent, noble and dignified expression, showing no signs of shyness; clear colors and straight or slightly waved coat. A dog that suggests strength and stamina, rather than extreme speed."

In size, the male shoulder height runs from 24 to 27 inches, and the weight from 55 to 80 pounds. Females stand 23 to 26 inches at the shoulders, and weigh from 45 to 70 pounds.

MUCH OF THE dog's rugged beauty lies in the shiny black, silken coat, set off with rich chestnut or mahogany markings, and in his well-feathered legs and gaily-carried tail.

Gordon Setter Club of America standards for temperament read:

"The Gordon Setter should be alert, gay, interested and aggressive. He should be fearless and willing, intelligent and capable. He should be loyal and affectionate, and strongminded enough to stand the rigors of training."

THE CLUB DATES back to 1924, and since then has been dedicated to promoting and improving the Gordon Setter breed.

In Marinites Mr. and Mrs. Keith Bechler and two young daughters, the club has four enthusiastic converts eager to do their share in singing the praises of the hunting dog from the Highlands.

Wooden Ornaments Give Christmas Old-Fashioned Air

They're A Labor Of Love For Women Of Boyd Museum Guild

"It is almost like selling one of your children."

THE WOMEN have produced 500 of the ornaments, a popular feature at the sale, for the 1966 Festival of Trees, to be held Friday from 6 to 11 p.m. and again next Saturday from 12:30 to 11 p.m. at Dominic's Harbor Restaurant in San Rafael.

The boutique was launched as a source of funds for the natural science museum in 1962. Each guild was asked to produce articles of some kind for sale at the event.

IT WAS MRS. Henry B. Grandin who suggested the small Christmas ornaments of wood, painted in bright primary colors. It was an idea borrowed from the annual Dominican (San Domenico) bazaar, in which Mrs.

Storybook Figures For The Yule Tree

Grandin had been active. The wooden figures had once been a traditional part of that bazaar, but had since been abandoned.

Many members of the Ross Guild promptly volunteered the services of their husbands and their do-it-yourself equipment for the production of their products.

SINCE THEN, the women have relied upon him for most of their sawing, using whatever tools they might be able to "beg or borrow."

Other husbands, however, have helped from time to time. And this year the guild had the services of a woodworker from the Marin Volunteer Bureau.

"When we started out, we thought our figures had a Swedish look," Mrs. Way says, "and we still feel the basic idea is Scandinavian, although I have seen similar ornaments from Hawaii.

"But through the years, we have developed our own creations, so that now I guess you would have to say the figures are American."

THE TRADITIONAL Santa Claus, the angel, the tree, the snow-covered house, etc., are still a part of the output. But the most popular creations are storybook characters, particularly those of "Winnie-the-Pooh" origin.

"Pooh, the Piglet, Eeyore and the Owl all sell well," Mrs. Way says. "But Pooh and Piglet go especially fast. We've never quite understood why."

One measure of the popularity of the wooden ornaments with their old-fashioned charm is the nearly doubling of the initial output in 1962 of 300 ornaments.

THE PROJECT begins each January in the search for the good-grade quarter-inch hardwood plywood needed for the figures.

"We start visiting our neighboring lumberyards, looking for scrap material," Mrs. Way says. "From that scrap, we hope to salvage sufficient usable wood by drawing our designs and cutting around the knots and other imperfections."

The wood collected and the designs drawn upon it, the next step is the location of a jig saw with an owner agreeable to the loan of his tool.

THE WOMEN themselves are divided into two teams — the "sanders" and the "finishers."

"And each know they are the more important," smiles Mrs. Way.

Over the past four years, the guild women have worked in a wide assortment of places — in homes, in garages, in sheds and out-of-doors, sometimes in groups, sometimes in pairs, sometimes individually.

The pieces of cut plywood are sanded and filled, painted with one coat of enamel base, then sanded smooth again.

"THIS IS MOST important, since an improper base coat and rough edges make the ornaments impossible to finish correctly," says Mrs. Way with the authority of an experienced "handyman" who through the years has become knowledgeable on the subject of woodworking.

The "finishers" then apply the enamel coats and do the detail work.

Mrs. Way recalls that one year the painting was done in a leaky shed "with our 'artists' dodging rain drops and just hoping that the paint would dry, despite the dampness."

THIS YEAR one guild member was in the process of moving at the crucial time. Nevertheless, she permitted a committee of sanders to use her home as their base of operations. And somewhat surprised prospective home buyers found themselves being directed around women hard at work with sandpaper on plywood as they inspected the premises.

The program has even had its casualties.

A male volunteer gashed his head when he fell down a hill in the darkness late one night after he had done his part — some sawing in a hillside shed.

THE WOMEN set their completion date for mid-November.

"But sometimes it has been virtually on the eve of the Festival of Trees," Mrs. Way admits.

"After 10 months and more of that kind of labor and worry, it is no wonder our women feel a tinge of remorse when they have to part with a Pooh bear, or a drum, or a toy soldier," says Mrs. Way.

This year the women have raised their prices for the ornaments from the former $1 to $1.50 per piece.

"STILL, THAT doesn't seem like much for all that work," says Mrs. Way. "I guess you'd have to call it a labor of love."

The festival itself with its display and sale of decorated Christmas trees, wreaths, table arrangements, small gift items, etc., from merchants and individuals as well as the guilds, is held to raise money to expand the educational program of the Boyd Museum, to purchase equipment and visual aids needed to augment school science classes, and to add a planetarium dome to the proposed new museum building to be located at the Marin Civic Center.

A Sausalito House That Has Charm And History

60-Year-Old Perry Biestman Home Has Withstood Time In Grand Style

THE DINING ROOM table of the 60-year-old Perry Biestman home in Sausalito is an Irish wake table that, at Christmas time, is laden with fruit and greens. Walls are decorated with old English valentines and memorabilia. Beyond the dining area, you can see another spot where the Biestmans enjoy eating — the fernery that was once a tool shed. The handsome old home will be included in next Wednesday's benefit tour for the Sausalito Nursery School.

There are six homes on the itinerary for Wednesday's benefit house tour for the Sausalito Nursery School.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Biestman moved into the home at 19 Prospect Avenue, Sausalito, a year ago.

When they did so, they acquired not only a charming dwelling, but also a piece of property that has played its role in Sausalito history.

EARLIEST KNOWN mention of the property came in 1872 when the survey separating the holdings of the Old Sausalito Land and Drydock Co. and the Sausalito Land and Ferry Co. resulted in a line, in effect the boundary between Old Sausalito and New Sausalito, that ran through the parcel.

There is still today, in the upper court of the Biestman garden, a granite marker, the result of that survey.

THE PRESENT house had its origins in 1906 or 1907 when, shortly after the earthquake, it was constructed as a summer cottage by the Wright family. The original structure included what is today the living room and the basement studio-workshop.

The remainder of what is now a large, two-story house was added soon thereafter.

THE BIESTMANS purchased the home and property from the Carl Springs. Mrs. Biestman describes the brown shingle residence as "turn-of-the-century California" in its styling, stating that it is typical of its period, and adding that it has withstood the years in "grand shape."

Mrs. Biestman, a professional metalsmith, quickly converted the basement into a studio which the children also use for their projects.

The house has been decorated with a combination of antique and contemporary furniture and art objects that range from primitive pieces to paintings done by Mrs. Biestman's mother, artist Nell Sinton. New Guinea, Japan, Greece and Europe are represented in the home. The furniture is largely Irish and English antiques, and the dining room walls are old English valentines and memorabilia.

ONE SMALL room has been left as a playroom. There children are permitted to paint pictures on the old papered walls. And when the paintings need changing, the walls are simply painted over.

Homes to be visited Wednesday will be embellished with their Christmas decor. Guests at the Biestman home will find that house bedecked simply with fresh flowers and greens, and with antique Christmas cards and ornaments.

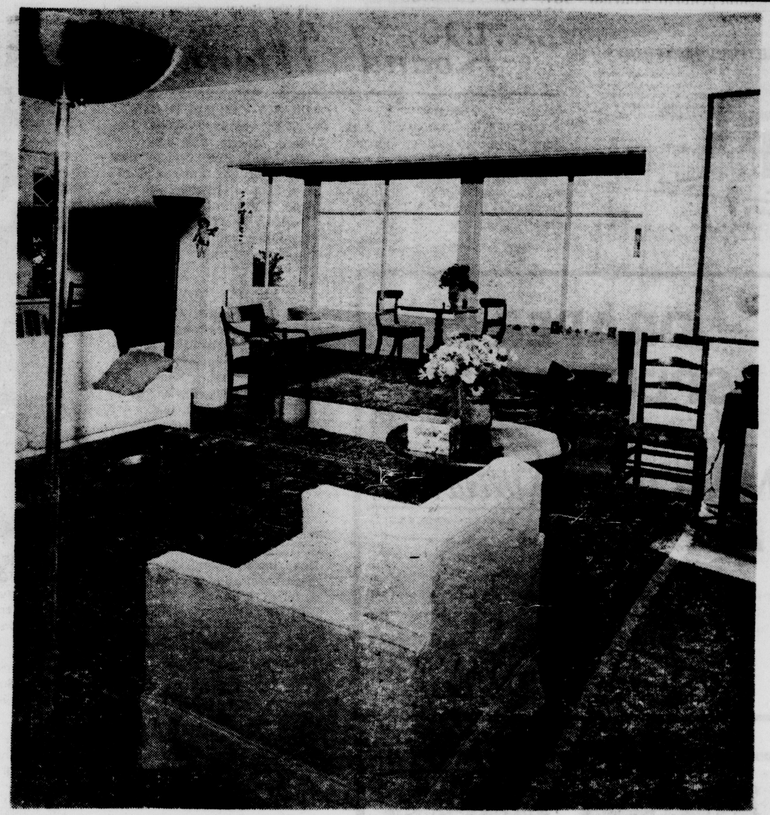
It is also in keeping, she feels, with the special charm of her home with a history.



THE LIVING ROOM of the Biestman home is part of the original house, built back in 1906 or 1907, shortly after the great earthquake, by the Wright family as their summer home. Contrasting contemporary and antique art and furnishings create an eye-pleasing effect.

WHEN THE BIESTMANS decorate their home for Christmas, they prefer to do so simply — with greens, flowers, antique ornaments, and early 20th Century Christmas cards. Here Mrs. Biestman and daughter Anne select cards from their collection.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

New albums from RCA Victor:

JEFFERSON AIRPLANE TAKES OFF — RCA Victor Stereo LSP-3584:

The "Airplane" consists of five shaggy but earnest young men and one girl. They were about the first of the new "Big Beat" groups to emerge from the Bay Area. Their style is loud but with a sensible and esthetic sort of construction. It hits you right between the eyes, but still doesn't seem raucous.

The balance between singing voices and electric guitars is exemplary—every word can be heard. That's something that can't be said for the latest Beatles effort.

"Come up the Years," their biggest hit, is of course included, plus 10 others, mostly originals. As a recently converted adult folk rock fan, I heartily recommend the Airplane, plus of course the Beatles and the Spoonful to any oldsters just beginning to pay attention to this stuff.

DUKE ELLINGTON
His most important

DUKE ELLINGTON'S CONCERT OF SACRED MUSIC — RCA Victor Stereo LSP-3582:

This is the unique musical service which The Duke premiered in San Francisco's Grace Cathedral in September of 1965 and later repeated at New York's Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church where this LP was recorded in performance.

Ellington refers to it as the most important thing he has ever done. It certainly will become a high-point of the wide-ranging creative efforts of this great American composer.

The eight selections on the disc encompass straight instrumental pieces, vocals with orchestra—some of them spirituals, an Ellington piano solo and a grand finale featuring tap dancer Bunny Briggs who "dances before the Lord" with the band. Three different versions of the gorgeous and uplifting Ellington melody from "Black, Brown and Beige," — "Come Sunday"—are interspersed in the service with glorious effect.

It seems that Charles Ives has replaced Telemann as the hottest discovery of the recording industry. Works of this formerly ignored American composer are now appearing rapidly, usually (as with this symphony) for the first time on records.

Unfortunately, the Symphony No. 1 is not very Ivesian. Dvorak-ish, Mahler-istic and Beethovenian perhaps, but not Ives.

It is a very early work, done for university credit, and eclectic as all get-out. Later Ives was plenty eclectic too, using well-known march tunes, church hymns, etc., but that was on purpose and this isn't. Stravinsky's first symphony is exactly the same, only his model was Rimsky-Korsakoff.

But works such as these give a good insight into the composers and provide some knowing chuckles for informed listeners at the same time. The America Variations are practically hilarious, but Question is an ultra-work that receives here its most communicative performance on records.

Release of this album fitted in well with the recent visit to Stanford of Kodaly and a special concert there devoted to his works. Hary Janos, being his most popular work, was not of course included on the concert because it is heard everywhere today. It you don't have it in your library yet, this new BSO version is tops and the Dynagroove sound perfect. The cimbalom soloist is a whiz. The second work is usually called The Peacock Variations, and this is its first stereo discing. The album notes were written by the now-84 Kodaly.

RICHARD STRAUSS: Sonata in E Flat, Opus 18; SPOHR: Concerto No. 8 in A Minor - Jascha Heifetz, with (1) Brooks Smith, piano; (2) RCA Victor Orchestra/Izler Solomon - also TCHAIKOVSKY: Serenade melancolique—RCA Victor LM-2860:

Although the Strauss may not have been released before, the Spohr and Tchaikovsky works were in the catalog for many years and it is good to have them again.

Although Spohr tends to bore, Heifetz squeezes the greatest excitement and interest out of the music. The Strauss violin/piano sonata is both tuneful and heroic sounding. It is strange that this composer's wonderful chamber music is so little appreciated.

Bouquets to Victor for resisting the impulse to re-channel these old tapes for pseudo-stereo and thereby probably distort what remains a fine fidelity mono recording.

KURT WEILL: Mack the Knife and Other Berlin Theater Songs—The Sextet of Orchestra USA—RCA Victor Stereo LSP-3498:

John Lewis' 40-man orchestra created to perform every type of music from early classical to contemporary jazz has yet to make a really successful LP.

However, with the great tunes of Kurt Weill, and the talents of this sextet selected from the orchestra, a very worthwhile session resulted. The late reed genius Eric Dolphy is heard, as well as Thad Jones and John Lewis himself. On bass trumpet is the singular Michael Zwerin, whose regular occupation is president of a large steel corporation!

All Weill fans, this writer included, will want to at least hear this LP.

STRAVINSKY: Agon; SCHULLER: Seven Studies on Themes of Paul Klee — Boston Symphony Orchestra/Erich Leinsdorf—RCA Victor Stereo LSC-2879:

Leinsdorf puts a little more meat on Agon's bones than Stravinsky does in his own dry performance of this atonal ballet score. The Schuller has also been recorded in stereo before, but the combination of the BSO's first-chair skills with Victor's engineering department results in a winner for this latest version.

Of the seven Klee paintings—sort of an up-to-date Pictures at an Exhibition—"The Twittering Machine" is the most accurately and humorously depicted. I wish Victor had made this album a double-fold job with reproductions of all of the Klee paintings, to follow with the music.

This is a handsome double-fold album devoted to a pair of conservative modern orchestral works that appeal because of a distinctively American rhythmic and harmonic idiom.

It is the first stereodiscing of the Copland piece. While two others precede the Gould, they lack the authority of the composer's very own performance.

The liner notes are devoted to much Dynagroove propaganda from one of RCA's top engineers. But the sound truly is smashing on a good stereo system. The ultra-low level of noise, rumble and hiss invite cranking up all the watts you have at your command.

BRAHMS: The Liebeslieder Waltzes (complete) Endich/Kopleff/McCoy/Uppman/Frank and Kallir, pianists/The Robert Shaw Chorale — RCA Victor Stereo LSC-2864:

The vocal music of Brahms frequently has a lilt to it that is utterly captivating, but quite different from that of the Strausses.

These songs, full of high spirits and love-under-the-linden tree sentiments. They were intended originally for the performance of musical amateurs for their own amusement.

This quartet is everything one could ask for, and the backing of the renowned Robert Shaw Chorale is just right as spread out before the listener in stereo. Complete texts are thoughtfully enclosed.

COLLEGE OF MARIN student Joe Wahnsiedler places reinforcing steel in the form of the foundation of the ceramic department's new and larger reduction kiln. Funds from next Friday's pottery sale, an annual event at the college, will go toward financing the project. Bidding, in the Art Building on the Kentfield campus, will begin at 7:30 p.m. and close at 9 o'clock.

Bare LOUDSPEAKERS(no matter how expensive will have a very poor sound quality if used without a cabinet. Imagine what a bass fiddle or a guitar would sound like if the backs of these instruments were cut out. The large boxes of these instruments are the sound chambers to provide resonance for the strings. The speaker also needs a box around it to provide the resonant sound chamber and to isolate the rear waves generated as the cone moves back and forth.

The speaker enclosure is as important as the speaker itself. The cabinet must be fully enclosed, made of very heavy material so that it won't vibrate, must be lined with an absorbent material such as one inch fibreglass to fully deaden the wood sound.

Open back cabinets, or perforated masonite cabinets will have a one note bass, that is bass response which lacks clear distinct definition especially in the organ pedal region of sound. To the untrained ear this one note bass will appear at first to sound good, but to the trained ear (your hearing becomes very acute quite rapidly) it will sound like a boom box or a juke box bass.

Component speaker systems are housed in chambers explicitly designed for the speaker elements being used. In the case of the handsome component equipment consoles these consoles are made with properly designed speaker cabinets as part of the furniture. In other words custom furniture for component music systems is designed with as much care as the electronics, the record player or the tape recorder themselves. Provisions are also made for the proper ventilation of the equipment, and some adjusting of the speaker compartments for the speakers selected. One of the great advantages of a component home stereo system is the fact that the user can choose not only a fine set of electronics but just the right piece of furniture to add the right touch of elegance to your home.

Visit our show rooms. You will hear that a properly integrated music system outperforms the commercially available mass produced consoles. Above all, next time you see that good looking— —, look behind it.

CAROLINA SAGE Harry Golden has authored another of his collections of essays and epigrams under the title "Ess, Ess, Mein Kindt." (Photo by James Yarnell)

Harry Golden's America

ESS, ESS, MEIN KINDT by Harry Golden, G. P. Putnam's Sons, 320 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Larry Kramer Jr.

"Ess, Ess, Mein Kindt" is a loose collection of epigrams, recollections and personal editorials which expose the idiocy underlying so many of the problems between man and man in our society. There is an elegant simplicity about comments like:

"Now I hear many good people in New York complain about the Negroes and the Puerto Ricans—their bad-smelling tenements, they hang the wash out on the line, they leave the baby carriages in the hallways — and I answer: 'That's what they said about your mother 40 years ago.'"

The Golden Insurance Plan is his substitute for law or Christianity which have been ineffective in quelling bombings and killings in the South. Golden thinks capitalism should be given a chance.

"Every civil rights worker or Negro in Mississippi and Alabama ought to sit right down and take out a term insurance policy for $25,000. It is not expensive . . . But (he) ought to make positive he takes out a term policy with no company but a Mississippi or an Alabama company. New York or Oregon won't do. If Alabama and Mississippi don't care about human life they are likely to care even less about insurance companies in other states."

Superficially, it may seem odd that an immigrant Jew transplanted from New York City's Lower East Side to North Carolina should be able to describe the ironies of contemporary life in America in such a way as to appeal to a national audience. Odd it may be, but nevertheless, Harry Golden is very much in our tradition, following in the footsteps of Finley Peter Dunne's Irishman and Will Rogers' cowboy.

The essence of Golden's gift is that he converts abstractions into meaningful human issues, the way the butcher turns tough meat into hamburger.

Golden is fascinated by the mobility possible in America, and by the speed with which one generation or two can cover geographic, economic and social ground. He sees the immigrant moving from village life in Europe, unchanged for centuries, to the jet age in America. That is his generation and he understands it. He sees the young people trying to convert the finest of American ideals into reality, and although that is not his generation he understands a good deal of what makes it tick as well.

This is a good book for dipping into. It also might encourage readers to leaf through Mr. Dooley or Will Rogers' "Illiterate Digest" again. They wear exceeding well.

A Candid View Of Americans As Others See Us

In the tradition of de Tocqueville and Gunnar Myrdal, Susan Cooper, an English girl who married an American atomic scientist in 1963 and now lives in Winchester, Mass., gives us an objective and, in my opinion, accurate appraisal of what we are and what we think we are — of what foreigners think of us, and what we wrongly think of foreigners.

Perhaps because she was so accurate in describing Time magazine, their anonymous reviewer gave her a facetious brush-off. But I don't believe the faceless one even carefully read the book, much less made an effort to be fair.

Susan Cooper read English at Oxford and was the first woman to edit the university newspaper, Chernwell. Upon leaving Oxford she joined The Sunday Times as a reporter, later becoming a senior feature writer and deputy news editor.

Her background is apparent in her prose style. After only a few pages, Henry Higgins' claim, "Why in America, English hasn't been spoken for years!" becomes entirely understandable. And yet she has an uncannily accurate ear for reproducing American regional dialects and speech mannerisms.

Although the book is highly amusing, I felt that all of its criticism is warranted and constructive.

We are insulated by a "Golden Curtain" of material well-being and we don't take well to criticism of any sort. But when we lose the power to laugh at ourselves or to join in with those who laugh at our foibles, then is the time for soul-searching.

A Guide To The Land Of Manana

JOHN WILHELM'S GUIDE TO MEXICO, Third Edition, McGraw-Hill, 390 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Price Hall.

Not having read the two previous editions of "John Wilhelm's Guide to Mexico," it is hard to judge improvement. But this edition can add immeasurably to the enjoyment of a trip into Manana Land.

If the usual two or three weeks are allotted for your trip and you don't really want the Mexico City - Taxco - Acapulco special sanitary blueplate excursion, a little research between these hard covers will make your visit a lot more purposeful and productive.

Wilhelm's standards are reasonably high and his comments on accommodations are acceptably precise, to the end he probably has incurred the enmity of some travel brochure writers. With this guide in hand, you can nearly predict your expenses, the time necessary for leisure exploration and travel time to your next stop.

If you are an experienced visitor to Mexico, read "Guide to Mexico" anyway. It reads easily, is laced with short anecdotes about each area and the extensive listings should bring back a few pleasant memories.

Talent In Superabundance Displayed In Three Novellas

THE WOMAN WITH THE LITTLE FOX by Violette Leduc, Farrar, Straus & Giroux, 297 pages $3.95. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

For the first time, American readers can sample the fiction of Mlle. Leduc, whose autobiography "La Batarde" was the literary success scandal of last year.

A protege of Simone de Beauvoir, Sartre, Camus and others, she has eschewed deviant sex and other shock materials of her life story in the three novellas that make up this book. But she stuns one all the same — with her superabundance of talent.

The three stories have the same theme: The loneliness of a woman alientated from society.

The first, a country spinster, is more or less content with her lot, but when a stranger comes to her she floods him with long suppressed tenderness and love . . . but the stranger is dead. The second loner is Clotilde, an uncomprehending young servant girl who is shipped from pillar to place, her great love snatched from her the moment they meet. And the third, the woman with the little fox, is a starving old scrap of humanity who has known better days, now haunting the Metro sustained by her great love, a ratty fox fur.

These sketchy summaries do no justice to Mlle. Leduc. One could read her stories just for the poetic scalp-tingling imagery. But that is incidental: She evokes powerful human passions.

One must concur enthusiastically with the French intellectuals: Violette Leduc is an important discovery. As a matter of fact, she towers above her friend de Beauvoir as a fiction writer and, assuming one can judge from these three works only, may well rank with the top handful of European and American writers today.

Tips on Purchase and Home Care of Your Wardrobe
MARIN CLEANERS Phone 454-4792 — Member N.I.D. of San Rafael, Bel Aire & Fairfax
"What Care Should I Take In Garment Handling?"

You are concerned about both wear and home cleaning. Therefore you may be interested in the problems analyzed in the past year by the National Institute of Drycleaning.

Home bleaching is a major damage cause. Sodium hypochlorite bleach such as is used at home is sold in 5% concentrations – far greater than a commercial laundry or drycleaning plant would use. Consumers seldom dilute bleaches and often pour them directly into slowly moving clothing during a wash cycle. A loss of tensile strength results and a weak place developes into a hole on the next trip to the drycleaner.

Hidden color loss was another prime complaint. This was due to hair waving solutions. The color loss is usually near the neckline of a blouse or dress and is not noticed until after pressing. While the drycleaner often is blamed, the cause may have occurred several months before cleaning.

Color loss caused by perfume or after shave lotion is common. Both contain alcohol which, in contact with acetate fabric can cause color change. The color loss is often hidden by oils in the perfume which are removed in drycleaning.

Take care in bleaching, in contact with damp hair wave solutions and in applying perfumes. These three cause most of the damage complaints.

Reliving Again The Wonderful Capers Of A Couple Of Comics

By DON KEOWN

I suppose everyone has some special childhood pleasure he remembers with affection and nostalgia. For me, it is the Laurel and Hardy movies.

Not even a cowboy picture nor a Joe E. Brown comedy created the excitement that was produced within me by the announcement that a Laurel and Hardy film was the coming attraction at the local theater in our small Kansas town on the Dust Bowl's brim.

If one can watch a Laurel and Hardy picture time and time again without tiring, then one can read a book about the great comedy team more than once as well.

I've just completed a second reading of John McCabe's "Mr. Laurel & Mr. Hardy." The book, first published in 1961, has been issued in a new version that contains as a foreword the tribute delivered by comedian Dick Van Dyke as the eulogy at Stan Laurel's funeral, and a concluding chapter in which McCabe reminisces warmly of his first meeting with the comics and of the cherished relationship that resulted, particularly with Laurel.

The book is a rather strange one, ranging as it does from straight narration to interview format to correspondence with Hardy's widow.

It is not so much biography as it is a study of the kind of human beings Laurel and Hardy were, and of the contributions they made to American comedy, especially as masters of the mime.

MR. LAUREL & MR. HARDY by John McCabe, Grosset & Dunlap, 226 pages, $3.95.

THE JACKDAW AND THE WITCH by Sybil Leek, Prentice-Hall, 118 pages, $3.95.

If Charlie Chaplin was the king of comedy, then the brilliantly inventive Stan Laurel was the crown prince of clowns. And perhaps Laurel himself best stated the reason for the success of his partner and himself. "They must have seen the love we put into them," was the way he explained the audiences' enthusiasm for their pictures.

McCabe has a knack for describing the work of his subjects, and it makes wonderful reading for their fans. It brings back, too, memories of a different kind of humor — sight or visual comedy, as opposed to today's spoken gags.

Only Jackie Gleason and Art Carney among the current headliners come close to Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy in the zest and joyful innocence with which they plunge into their zany routines.

A SMALL BOOK entitled "The Jackdaw and the Witch" is currently attracting considerable attention, partly because of the unusual character of its author and partly because of the charm of the story itself.

Her book she describes as "a true fable." It tells the story of Mr. Hotfoot Jackson, a most unorthodox bird who joins the Leek household and, even in that unpredictable household, creates quite a stir.

Whether you accept Mrs. Leek's claim to witchhood or not, you'll have to agree that she has a considerable gift as a writer, having spun here a warm and humorous little yarn for all ages that intrigues and entertains all the way.

ONE OF those moments of truth and trial comes for parents when son or daughter first takes up driving. There follows, not long after, another, when the offspring begins campaigning for a car of his or her own.

To ease those ordeals, Henry Gregor Felsen has written a couple of books. Published earlier was his "To My Son, the Teen-Age Driver," to help youth through those first crucial weeks of coping with the monster machine on wheels. Now he has followed that with "A Teen-Ager's First Car" (Dodd, Mead, $3.25), which advises the youngsters on how to select and buy an automobile, what the legal and insurance aspects of car ownership involve, and the basics of vehicular maintenance and repair.

Parents might well want to place it in the hands of their children when they see that second moment of truth approaching.

AMERICAN Book Collector of 1822 School Street, Chicago, has published a special issue devoted to Jack London.

THE STORY of the drafting of our Constitution is told by Catherine Drinker Brown in her "Miracle at Philadelphia," the Book-of-the-Month Club selection for December.

A SCENE FROM the movie "Blockheads" is among the illustrations included in John McCabe's "Mr. Laurel and Mr. Hardy," now released in an updated version with introduction by Dick Van Dyke.

Milo is set up in a friend's apartment in Los Angeles, downing the friend's booze, ogling the friend's girls. The friend is in Rome and Milo is on vacation—at least for a day. Then there's murder. A hood is shot to death in an adjoining apartment, and one of Milo's dates is a suspect.

An insurance company for which Milo does investigations ruins the vacation further by putting him back to work. He's assigned to find out about millions in jewel robberies in Beverly Hills. They all tie in to the girl, and Milo thinks she's innocent — at least of murder.

But he has to prove it, and he can't until, literally, he is showered with diamonds. Chaber has fashioned a jewel, just a few carats less in weight than his recent "Six Who Ran."

Little El Salvador Beckons Tourists

Tiniest Central American State Has Much To Offer

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador —This Tom Thumb country of the Americas, long noted for coffee and volcanoes, is out to make a name for itself in an even more competitive and unpredictable field — tourism.

IN A WORLD which often seems to be impressed only by the "biggest and best," they are selling the tiniest, seeking to capitalize on the country's ranking as the smallest of Central America.

At the National Tourist Institute, which began its all-out push in 1964 when Pan American World Airways brought El Salvador into the jet age, they put it this way:

"We call it the most compact travel package in this hemisphere. El Salvador is small in size but vast in the variety of its attractions."

BOASTING A good highway system, El Salvador offers quick, easy access to mountain tops and tropical valleys, volcanic lakes and Pacific Coast beaches, to ancient Mayan cities and modern residential sections.

Just 12 miles from this bustling capital city of a quarter-million population and past the coffee town of Santa Tecla is the fascinating park known as "Los Chorros," Spanish for water spouts.

Here man and nature have combined to create three large swimming pools on three different levels fed by cool mountain water spouting from towering rock cliffs — and all ringed by secluded cliffside walkways through lush tropical vegetation.

REACHING THE uppermost pool, partly enclosed in a cavern, requires maneuvering on overwater rock walk which reputedly has produced more unplanned dunkings than a Kennedy pool party.

An awesome sight of nature's wonder by day. Chorros is now a colorful sight of man's enhancement by night. Through the cooperation of prominent local citizens, underwater lights were recently installed, and the after-dark view now is a color spectacular.

JUST A SHORT ride into the hills overlooking San Salvador is Balboa Park and its Devil's Door vantage point for a sweeping view of the city.

An hour's ride away is Lake Coatepeque and its medicinal waters. Ten miles away is Lake Ilopango. Twelve miles away is "El Boqueron," the crater of San Salvador Volcano from the top of which, on a clear day, can be seen practically the whole country.

The country is booming industrially. Commercial travel is up, induced by the expanding Central American Common Market.

A MODERN airport on Pan Am's main jet line offers easy links with the United States and other parts of the Americas. Direct Jet Clipper routes bring visitors from San Francisco, New Orleans, Houston, Los Angeles, as well as such Latin American points as Mexico City, Guatemala, Central America and South American cities.

The San Salvador Intercontinental, a luxury hotel, provides complete resort facilities in a lush setting in the foothills on the residential outskirts of the city. Another modern hotel (the Gran) offers downtown location. More hotels are in the talking stage.

And the Salvadorean government has what the folks at the Tourist Institute call "a tourist awareness." Just how much was indicated by the blazing-eyed gal who described their planned assault on the 1966 convention of travel agents in Seattle:

"WE'RE SMALL, so we have to try harder. We invade with bands and gifts and a lot of noise. We really beat the drums. We have to. We're so small we have to yell louder just to be heard."

That's the attitude of this tiny infant in the jet age.

With that kind of drive, Tom Thumb is bound to be heard from in the tourist world.

MAN AND NATURE have combined to create Los Chorros (meaning water spouts) Park just a few miles from San Salvador, capital of El Salvador, the tiny Central American republic. High rock cliffs, lush tropical vegetation and three huge swimming pools are enjoyed by both Salvadoreans and vacationing visitors.

A CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

✔ Plant one of the heathers for lovely winter bloom in your garden.

✔ When deciduous shrubs go dormant, it is good idea to use a dormant spray on them to knock out hibernating insects and scale. Be careful to avoid evergreens with the spray.

✔ Stay off the lawn as much as possible after soaking rains, so as not to damage the grass or to compact unnecessarily the ground.

Gardening Page

How Are You Fixed For Autumn Color?

The accent has been on autumn this month.

You see it in the yellow of cottonwood trees on the desert, golden poplars in a Mother Lode town, autumn-hued chrysanthemums in our own gardens, all set against the bracing change of weather which makes fall our most exciting season.

"Coastal gardens will never match foothill gardens for foliage color and are better when the emphasis is placed on berries and flowers. This is not to say that gardeners along the coast cannot have some foliage color, however.

"BEST BETS for fall foliage throughout California are from liquid-amber, gingko, Chinese pistache among the trees; Virginia creeper, Boston ivy and grapes, among the vines; pomegranate, Japanese barberry, and Oregon grape among the shrubs.

"We also recommend to gardeners that they put emphasis on berries—especially pyracantha—for fall color and on such flowers as chrysanthemums and dahlias, with some late-planted zinnias and marigolds for good measure."

"More people should plant with fall in mind. Most planting is done with only spring and summer in mind."

Other nurserymen add to this list. Heavenly Bamboo, for instance, is especially nice a bit back from the coast, giving both colorful foliage and berries as well.

THE INITIAL list gives us a starting point, however, and it's up to us to enlarge upon it through experience.

We are especially intrigued by the suggestion that Boston ivy and Virginia creeper be planted for fall color. The former, especially, seems to color up vividly in California, and why it isn't planted more seems a mystery. Perhaps wall-hugging vines went out with the brick house, but there's no reason for not planting them on retainer walls.

We also like the recommendation for Oregon grape, our own native color bearer. Given a sunny location, its leaves turn to beautiful shades of crimson each fall—and this despite the fact the shrub is evergreen. The leaves color up and don't even fall off. Its like having your cake and eating it too.

The Best Solution To Storage Problem Is Basement Closet

Handyman's Pages

Are the closets in your home forever cluttered and crowded?

You can obtain some relief by cleaning them out and discarding the old, broken and worn out belongings which are just taking up space. Then you can rearrange everything to make maximum use of the available area.

But if your family is like most, these efforts will still not provide enough extra space to solve your storage problems.

THE BEST long-range answer is to build a large storage area for out-of-season clothing in the basement, where the stored items will be out of sight and out of the way.

Surprisingly, such a project can be completed with limited cost. To get the most out of such a closet, you will want to consider the possibility of lining the walls with aromatic red cedar. This will make it moth-repellent and will provide the needed storage space for your garments.

The first step in building your basement closet is to frame out and area with two-by-four studs. If your basement is already divided, the divider wall can serve as the back closet wall.

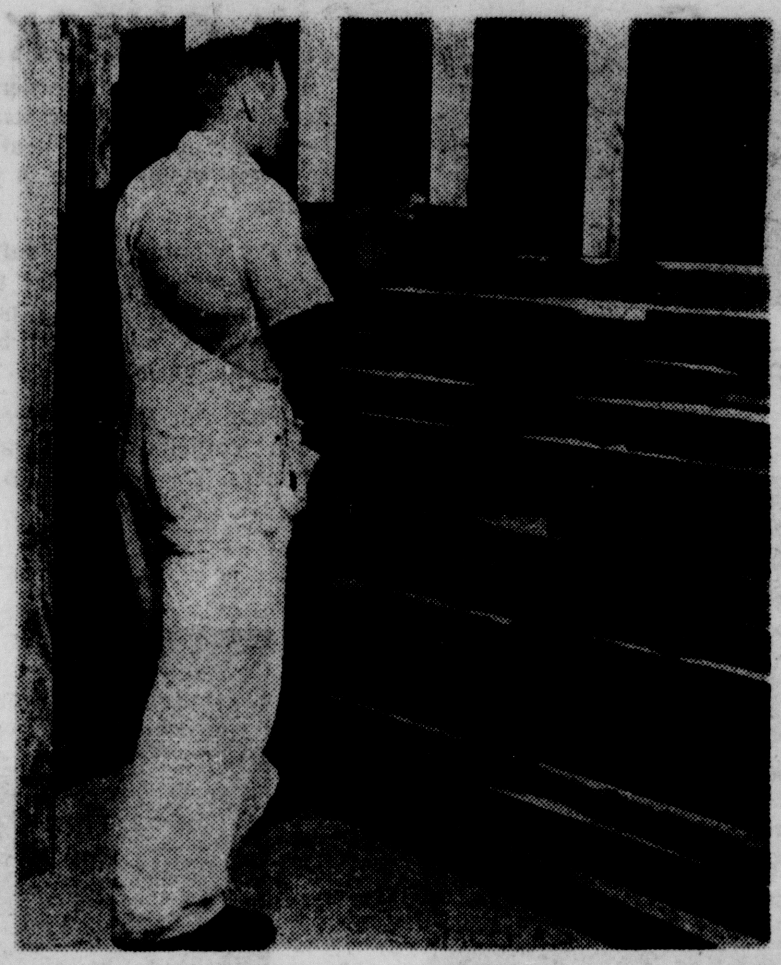
IF THE CLOSET is built along an outside wall, it is recommended that a vapor barrier be placed between the studs and outer wall. Such a barrier — a polyethene sheet, for example— effectively protects the closet and its contents from dampness and moisture.

To line the closet, simply nail the pieces of cedar, which are tongue-and-grooved, directly over the framework. No wallboard or other backing is needed. Cedar lining is available at local lumber dealers in prepackaged bundles or cartons.

Remember when you construct the framing for your closet to leave enough room for a large door. This will provide easy access to the closet and enable you to place large suitcases or containers inside without a great deal of fuss.

IF POSSIBLE, you should line the ceiling, floors and inside of the door as well as the walls with cedar. This will insure maximum protection from moths. Shelves, too, should be constructed of the aromatic wood.

When the project is completed you will find that you have not only added to your home storage area, you have also increased its resale value and beauty.



BUILDING A BASEMENT cedar closet is a relatively easy project for the home handyman. After the closet is framed out, nail the cedar lining directly to the studs. Start at the bottom and apply the pieces of pre-cut, tongue-and-grooved red cedar horizontally, using small finishing nails. Joints need not occur over the studs. For a professional looking job, trim the corners with strips of quarter-round molding.

Awning Wall For The Patio

A roofed patio gives a lot of protection from the weather. Yet, there may be times when a windscreen would add greatly to comfort.

An awning wall might make the difference and is easy to build. An awning wall is a lightweight screen built of western red cedar which is designed to work something like a tent flap. The upper edge is hinged to the patio roof so it can swing up and out, awning style, or hang vertically like a wall.

Swung out, propped on legs, it opens the patio to the breezes, but provides additional sun shelter. Down, in wall position, it makes a fine wind and privacy screen.

Cedar one-by-fours are used for the awning wall's frame, and one-by-ones spaced a quarter-inch apart are nailed into the frame to finish it. The legs holding it horizontally while in awning position could be made to fold up against the screen when lowered.

Dutch Doors Lend Elegance To Rear Entrance To Your Home

BECAUSE THEY can be opened by halves, Dutch doors have a special advantage as back or side entrances. With the top section open and the bottom part closed, you can let in air and sunlight, talk to tradespeople and still keep small children and pets safely inside.

Variety is another of the attractive features of Dutch doors. Stock units combine top and bottom designs. Upper and lower portions can be selected separately, customized to satisfy any architectural taste.

For example, you can buy stock units that include a top section of solid panels, glass panes or grills and a bottom section that has a single panel, open-Bible or St. Andrew's Cross design.

ALL PONDEROSA pine Dutch doors have factory-applied weatherstripping around the edges and along the meeting rail so that the closed door is sturdy and tight. They also are treated with a chemical preservative to protect against termites, rot and weather abuse.

The doors are precision-fitted for easy installation and are ready to stain, paint or varnish.

FEEL GUILTY while soaking in the tub? Then just have hubby build you a beauty bar, and you can both relax and at the same time spend those minutes constructively. A book can be propped on the counter and you can learn while relaxing. Compartment in center offers handy storage for lotions, creams and other beauty aids. Send 75 cents to Independent-Journal, Post Office Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., and ask for Easi-Bild's Bathtub Beauty Bar Pattern No. 327. It is complete and easily followed.

When Bureau Drawers Stick Is No Time For Muscle Power

Jiggle the drawer a little if you wish. But don't attempt to open it by force alone.

You'll ruin whatever it is in the drawer that is causing the jam. Or you'll break off a joint or piece of wood that is loose, creating a major problem. Or, if the wood is swollen and warped and doesn't give, you'll huff and puff and get nothing but a red neck.

YOU CAN usually tell when something inside the drawer is causing the trouble, either because the drawer opens a little and sticks or because you are well aware that it's overloaded and you suspected that something like that would happen one day.

If it's the top drawer, slide something thin — like a metal ruler—along the opened edge of the drawer and carefully poke around until the protruding item is pushed out of the way. In a very extreme case, you might have to remove the back of the bureau by taking out the nails or screws that hold it in place.

THE MOST common cause of a sticking drawer is swollen wood, caused by excessive moisture. Try the jiggling first. Most of the time it will open the drawer part way.

A lighted electric bulb placed in the opening will shrink the wood and permit the drawer to be opened all the way, but this must be done very carefully so that the bulb doesn't touch anything that will ignite. Taking out the drawers above and/or below the balky one may permit you to work it loose.

Putting a space heater or dehumidifier in the room near the bureau often shrinks the wood within a few hours and enables the drawer to be opened.

ONCE THE drawer is opened, you'll notice evidences of rubbing on the sliding surfaces. Sandpaper these areas, try the drawer carefully, then sandpaper again if necessary—the objective of the test being to insure against taking off too much wood the first time. All wood that has been exposed by the sanding should be sealed with a coat of shellac.

When a drawer opens and closes all the way, but shows some sign of sticking, sanding may not be necessary. Instead, rub all the sliding parts with paraffin or one of the lubricants made especially for wood.

Don't make the common mistake of wetting a cake of soap and running it along the slides. This will make the drawer work all right, but it also will put moisture into the wood and cause future trouble.

Late Fall Is Time To Work On Home

By VIVIAN BROWN

Most people feel better after a season of sun, fun and exercise. They can invest that energy in their homes.

Everybody has a question — how much will it cost to build a new closet, is there time to add an extra room before winter winds really howl, should they stain their floors a dark color? Even windows sills get some attention.

"WE LIVE IN an old house and our window sills are in bad condition. It has been suggested that we can cover them with a plastic material. Must this be laminated to the sills? Are there other materials that may be used?" is the question from one homemaker.

The plastic referred to may be the adhesive-backed papers that are treated to withstand moisture. These may be applied easily but wear would depend on how much moisture will seep in and so on. You could always remove it, if it didn't work out. These come in attractive tortise shell and marble designs.

Marble is an atractive material for sills that is finding its way into more homes, but it is not inexpensive. Wood window sills last a long time, and often it is better to replace rotten sills with wood.

PIPES THAT sweat in a bathroom are a problem that disturbs a new home owner, but experts advise that the condition clears up when the room is at normal temperature. It is caused by the condensation of water vapor in the air, the moisture forming on a container, such as water tank and pipes, holding a liquid cooler than the surrounding atmosphere.

A ventilating fan can help speed up evaporation, and a drip tray under the tank will help keep the floor dry. Some bathroom fixtures are built to offset this problem.

Many people on the move hesitate to spend money on fixed installations. If they own a house the built-ins should improve the property and may be added to the price, but if they rent a home as one woman points out, you can't have such things as storage walls. She doesn't like the look of temporary units, and they cost about as much, she says.

ONE REASON why people don't like the temporary unit look is that it looks temporary, but it need not. If it is planned properly in a series of units that fit together, it can fit any place now or in the future. It will take the services of a carpenter, unless one is skilled at such plans.

The important thing is to have a valance across the top of the ceiling that will drop below the top of the unit. That will give it the permanent look.

Some people have the base cabinet made in several sections so it will fit in a smaller area at a later time.

If this is done, then units above must be arranged so that if only one segment of the base cabinet fits into a new dwelling, the series of temporary sections above may be combined to fit properly with it. These are usually planned in different widths for an aesthetic pattern. The valance is shortened to accommodate the new width of the cabinet.

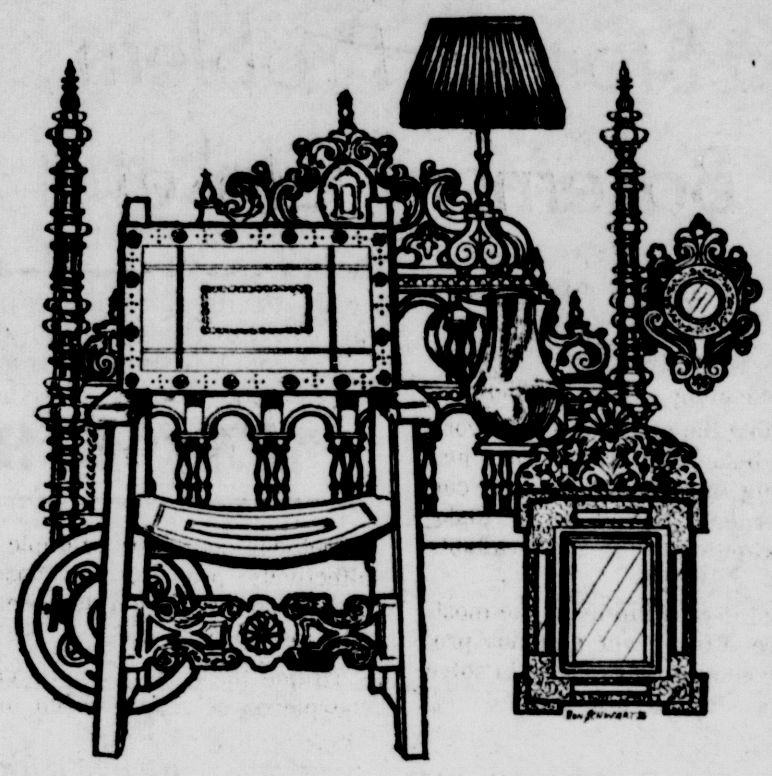
HERE'S A budget problem . . .

"After planning out an addition to our house, and getting estimates, that will just about need a new heating unit. Our old burner that was converted from a coal furnace will not take the new duct. My husband is all for shelving the addition, even though he hasn't even priced a new burner. Is there any low-cost heat that could be put in a room, 12 by 14? Are portable heaters effective? The new room is to be a nursery."

People who use portable heaters claim they are expensive to run.

It doesn't cost anything to get estimates from local companies. Some people are intimidated to ask for an estimate, feeling they are obligated to buy. Most companies are only too happy to cooperate.

BRIGHT IDEAS



IT MAY NOT be as exciting as a plane trip to Spain, but you can bring a bit of Hispanola into your own home. Just decorate one room of your home in the Spanish style, so that you will have a place in which to hide and escape from everyday living. It doesn't have to be Spanish. You could make it Japanese, or Danish, or Mexican. But keep it as authentic as possible. Search in shops for the wrought iron lamps, the candelabra, the hand-painted headboards, the delicate glassware, exotic fabrics, etc., that will help you to decorate your "escape room."
